ITALY CHARGES BRITAIN AIDS SPANISH REDS

Guns Allegedly Landed By Refugee Ships

"SITUATION SERIOUS" BUT NOT TRAGIC, SAYS DELBOS

According to a United Press despatch from London, the best informed British authorities state that Great Britain has definitely decided to permit the non-intervention agreement in Spain to expire if the Italians and Germans reject the Anglo-French control scheme.

London, July 1.

The fierce anti-British press campaign in Italy is gaining in weight and daring. It is bluntly alleged now that Great Britain is actively helping the Spanish "Red" Government.

Virginio Gayda, writing in his newspaper, Giornale d'Italia, accuses Britain of intervention. He says British ships which went to Bilbao to evacuate refugees carried four new batteries for the Spaniards, and that a London aircraft company is negotiating with the Basque Government's agent in Paris for the sale of 15 Hawker-Fury fighting machines.

The aircraft company named declares there is no truth in Gayda's statement. It states the company received inquiries for a supply of air ambulances for Spain and replied it would be pleased to supply these if export licences were obtainable. But apparently the Non-Intervention Committee has decided that the Geneva Convention does not apply to the Spanish war, the statement adds.

"Situation Obviously Serious"

Paris, July 1.

"The situation is obviously serious," said M. Yvon Delbos, French Foreign Minister, in a statement to the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Chamber of Deputies to-day, when questioned regarding the tension created by the Spanish situation. But he had never considered it tragic, he added.

The position could only improve as a result of a policy of firmness and perfect understanding with Great Britain, he declared.

M. Delbos added that France would continue to firmly uphold the Non-Intervention Agreement and an effective control plan.—Reuter.

CARDINALS FAIL TO HALT CUBS

Powerful Hitting By White Sox

New York, July 1.
Chicago again beat St. Louis to-day lengthening the lead in the National League. Collins hit a homer for the Cubs, and the score was six to three.

New York went further ahead, in second berth, defeating Philadelphia, eight to six. Each team hit eight times, Martin hitting a home run for the Phillies, Ott and Berger each circling the bases for the Giants.

Philadelphia had five errors.

Washington defeated Boston, three to two.

Chicago hit 20 times, scoring 15 runs, with the help of Hayes' homer, when the White Sox met Detroit.

Tigers hit 14, York pounding the ball over the fence, and scored eight.

Each had two errors.

St. Louis and Cleveland postponed their game because of rain.—Reuter.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

New York Yankees continued their unbroken winning streak by whipping Philadelphia in a heavy-hitting duel. The Yankees got 14 men to bases, not counting walks, and Di Maggio and Powell hit homers for 12 runs in all. Athletics hit all for seven runs. Philadelphia had five errors.

Washington defeated Boston, three to two.

Chicago hit 20 times, scoring 15 runs, with the help of Hayes' homer, when the White Sox met Detroit.

Tigers hit 14, York pounding the ball over the fence, and scored eight.

Each had two errors.

St. Louis and Cleveland postponed their game because of rain.—Reuter.

REFUGEE CHILDREN WHO REBELLED

Here is a ship-load of Spanish refugee children, bound for France from Bilbao. It was children like these who rioted in France recently, on learning of the fall of Bilbao, and again, following the slapping of one of their number by an attendant, beating nuns with their shoes, throwing knives and fighting police.

FARR NOW TO FIGHT JOE LOUIS

Schmeling Again Disappointed

London, July 1.
Farr and Louis will fight for the Welsh heavyweight, Tommy Farr, has announced that he has accepted terms and conditions offered by Mike Jacobs, manager of the Detroit negro, Joe Louis, claimant of the world's championship as a result of his victory on June 22 over Jim Braddock.

Farr and Louis will fight for the world's title some time in September. The Welshman, it was announced recently, would fight Max Schmeling, German ex-champion of the world, and that fight also was billed as a championship encounter. But it has been abandoned, presumably because Jacobs is offering better terms, and Schmeling will probably meet the winner.—Reuter.

Conservatives Retain Seat

London, July 1.
Out of an electorate of 74,000, less than 30,000 voters went to the poll in the by-election in the Kingston-on-Thames Division, caused by Sir George Penny's elevation to the Peerage. The seat was retained by the Conservatives with a greatly reduced majority. Details: Admiral Percy Roys (Con.) 19,887.
Mr. G. H. Loman (Lab.) 9,972.

Con. majority 9,915.

At the last General Election, Sir George Penny had a majority of 22,939, polling 32,953 against 10,014 secured by Mr. Loman, whilst Mr. F. J. Powell (Liberal) polled 5,832 votes.

Mr. Isaac Foot (Lib.) 12,834.

London, July 1.

Over six hundred guests were present.

Two more Courts are being held next week at Holyrood Palace, during the royal visit to Edinburgh.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

POLICE SERGEANT KILLED

Found Dead In His Office

Sergeant J. E. Scott, police armourer, was found dead in his office at 9.30 a.m. to-day. He was seated in his chair, and slumped forward across his desk.

Police are unable to determine, at this time, whether or not Sergeant Scott met his death accidentally. Investigations are proceeding.

Sergeant Scott was shot through the forehead, it appears, and died instantly. His body was found at 9.30 a.m. to-day, but it has yet been determined when he died.

He was about 36 years of age and had served with the Hongkong Police for ten years, coming here from a distinguished British Army battalion of the Northamptonshire Regiment.

Sergeant Scott had lived at Tai-ping-shan Police Quarters for some time and his office, where his body was found to-day, is at Central Police Headquarters.

Sergeant Scott was born in Hull. Coming to Hongkong in 1927, he had passed his first examination in Cantonese in 1929, his second in 1930, and his third in 1935. In 1935 he was highly commended by the I.G.P. for the excellence of his work as assistant police armourer, in which position he had served since 1928. He was a very popular officer.

MURDER HEARINGS ADJOURNED

At the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, Li Fuk-chong, chief manager of the Sincere's Perfumery Manufactory, again appeared on remand, charged with being an accessory before the fact in the murder of Mr. Chan Lai-tsun, alias David Chan Sze, former managing director of the Sincere Co. Detective Inspector Carey asked for a week's remand, but Mr. Lee D'Almeida, Senr., for the defence asked for a date to be fixed. The police, however, stated that this could not yet be done. Mr. D'Almeida said he would ask for a date at the next hearing. The case was adjourned for a week.

Later in the morning, Au Hing, the last of four men arrested in connection with the crime, was charged with the actual murder. He appeared in the dock with a detective in attendance. A week's remand was granted.

STOP PRESS

Charles Fuxman, of the Marcel Cafe, was charged at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning with having, on June 23, received 68 lbs. of beef, 29 kippers and two wooden boxes, knowing them to have been stolen. Detective Sub-Inspector Cunningham appeared for the police, and Mr. Peter Sin for the defence. The case was adjourned to Tuesday, July 6, at 2.30 p.m., defendant being granted bail of $200.

Endeavour II Selected As Challenger

New York, July 1.
Mr. T. O. M. Sopwith, the British sportsman, announced to-day that his yacht, Endeavour II, would be the challenger for the America's Cup.

Mr. Sopwith brought two beautiful yachts to the United States this year, the newly constructed racing craft, Endeavour II, and the original challenger, Endeavour I. There is little to choose between them, but the new boat appears to be seconds faster in the mile.—Reuter.

AGREEMENT CONTINUES

Washington, July 1.
Mr. Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the U.S. Treasury, has announced that the tri-partite monetary agreement will continue. Britain, France and the United States are original signatories, while Belgium, Switzerland and Holland co-operate in the scheme.—Reuter.

BOURSES HOLD GAINS

Paris, July 1.
The Bourses held their gains to-day despite late profit-taking. The franc declined rapidly to 1928 levels.—United Press.

TRI-PARTY PACT SAFE

Washington, July 1.
At the end of night negotiations with Britain and France, Mr. Henry Morgenthau announced that the tri-partite agreement would continue.

In a message to the French Finance Minister, Mr. Georges Bonnet, he expressed the hope that co-operation would continue and the France would soon emerge from her difficulties.

Mr. Morgenthau stated that the technical arrangements of the tri-partite pact were still unchanged and stressed the point that serious disturbances would thus be prevented as a result of the French crisis.—United Press.

BRITAIN'S HOPES

London, July 1.
Asked in the House of Commons if he had received any intimation from the French Government as to their attitude towards the tri-partite currency agreement, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Simon, stated that the French Government had assured him that it was anxious to continue close co-operation with the Governments of the United States of America and the United Kingdom.

He had to-day sent the following reply to the French Minister of Finance: "Now that you, as French (Continued on Page 12.)"

RUSSIA WARNS JAPAN AGAINST DRASTIC STEPS

ANOTHER AMUR INCIDENT MAY HAVE "SERIOUS CONSEQUENCES"

Moscow, July 1:

No progress is reported in the Russo-Japanese negotiations regarding the Amur River incident, in which Japanese shore batteries shelled Russian patrol boats and a Japanese patrol ship was captured by Soviet river craft.

After a two-hour conversation here between M. Maxim Litvinoff, Foreign Commissar, and Mr. Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese Ambassador, they had not succeeded in altering the position, since both insisted upon the maintenance of a divergently viewed status quo by the other.

Insurgents Capture Basque Port

Population Stays To Greet Army Of Conqueror

Hendaye, July 1.

After a land and sea bombardment, the Spanish Insurgents captured the Biscayan seaport of Castro Urdiales, 25 miles east of Santander.

Insurgent frontier despatches report the majority of the population refused to flee, preferring "enthusiastically to greet the incoming army."

General Franco's headquarters now estimates that 40,000 Loyalists were slain in the siege of Bilbao and 100,000 wounded.

Meanwhile, there have been bombing attacks on Bilbao.

The Insurgents, however, have retailed with an attack on Loyalist positions between Castro Urdiales and Valmaseda, where 200 machines dropped 200-pound bombs in great numbers.—United Press.

Lull Around Madrid

St. Jean de Luz, July 1.

The main fighting at present is along the Santander front, where the Insurgents claim to have advanced, inflicting heavy losses on the Government defenders and capturing much war material.

There is a lull in the Madrid fighting, but the Insurgents are expected to make a big drive for the former capital after the capture of Santander, which they consider expected to bring their hands very shortly.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

CANTON'S INDUSTRY PROBLEM

Factory Control Not Yet Settled

British Interest In Financing

Canton, July 1.
A thorny problem which is at present facing the authorities here is the future of the Government-controlled industries. There are, in all, some fifteen factories of various kinds, in respect of which, it is stated, there is some $12,000,000 outstanding, mostly for the cost of the establishments and machinery.

General Wu Teh-chen considers that these factories should come under the Provincial Government direct, this being the procedure under General Chan Chai-tong's administration. General Hsu Ching-tong, the Minister of Reconstruction, has, however, been reluctant to hand over control to the Provincial Government.—(Continued on Page 12.)

M. Litvinoff pointed out that there would be "serious consequences if the Japanese-Manchukuoan 'unprecedented action' were repeated. But he assured the Ambassador that the Russians were willing to withdraw troops and cutters from the islands if the Japanese and Manchukuoans would do so.

Foreign observers are of the opinion that tension has been considerably relieved and what once threatened to become a very grave situation is now, assuming the character of a normal border incident.—Reuter.

"JUST ANOTHER INCIDENT"

Washington, July 1.

State Department reports indicate that the Amur clash between Russia and Japan "is just another border incident," according to a spokesman. It does not even justify State Department comment.

Neutrals discount the possibility of war, though they foresee long negotiations.—United Press.

RELIEVING SITUATION

Moscow, July 1.

"We are taking all measures to relieve the situation," declared Mr. Shigemitsu, Japanese Ambassador here, to-day, speaking of the Amur River crisis. He believes a peaceful settlement can be reached.

Japan has rejected the Soviet protest.—United Press.

NEGOTIATIONS INCONCLUSIVE

Tokyo, July 1.

The Foreign Office reports negotiations in Moscow inconclusive. M. Shigemitsu will have further talks with M. Maxim Litvinoff, Russian Foreign Commissar. A fresh protest against Soviet gunboats operating in Manchukuo waters and aggravating the situation, is anticipated.—United Press.

Steel Plant Re-Opens

General Settlement Not Yet In Sight

Chicago, Ill., July 1.

Thousands of men returned peacefully to work in the Inland Steel plants in East Chicago to-day. It was a triumph for the steel industry, since the strike began.

A local agreement made the reopening possible. The likelihood of a general agreement is diminished by the announcement that the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, President Purnell, is unwilling to make an agreement with the Steel Workers Organising Committee, subsidiary of the C.I.O.—Reuter.

STEEL SETTLEMENT

Chicago, July 1.

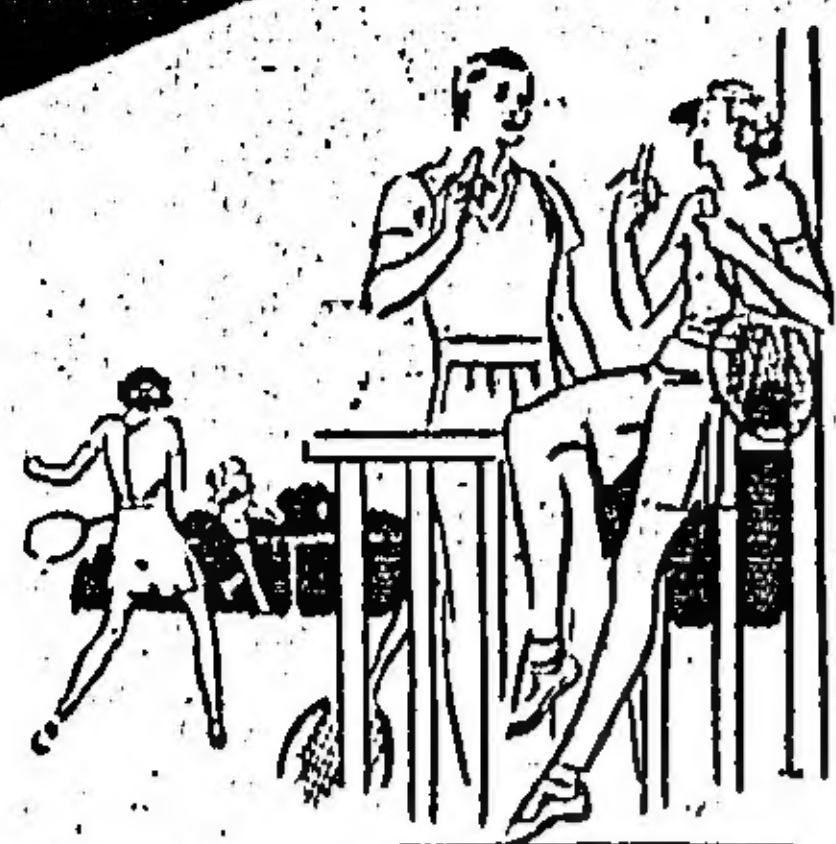

The settlement between the Inland Steel management and the striking union included all issues except the S.W.O.C. demand for a written contract, which point the Labour Relations Board is considering for judgment in Chicago.

The Youngstown Sheet management has deferred opening, but the Republic plant is operating in South Chicago, and Bethlehem and Youngstown companies are operating in East Chicago.—United Press.

ELECTRIFICATION

London, July 1.

The Southern Railway's mail line electrification between London and Portsmouth, completed at a cost of £2,500,000, was opened to-day. The new service will double the number of trains along this 74-mile route.—British Wireless.

BANANAS on the Family Menu

WHO do you envy most to-day? The sun-bather in Tahiti or the winner of a lottery ticket?

I dream of the small boy who looks at the blue sky and shining sun, and says: "No school to-day," and goes off fishing for tiddlers in the nearest pond.

But, really, we housewives spend far too much time, when the weather is good, preparing and cooking meals.

For Nature has so many ready-to-eat foods for us in summer time, with every vitamin and calory in them that the most exacting doctor could order.

Germ Proof Case

THINK of bananas, for instance. Here they come literally by the million, each one grown in a germ proof cover, from Jamaica.

In that land of sunshine they are the staple diet, and why shouldn't they be here? For never was there so much goodness and enjoyment packed into a single fruit!

The value of its tough outer skin cannot be over-estimated, for in summer time foods are easily contaminated, and quite often some form of food poisoning breaks out and germs are carried by flies and dust.

But there is no danger of the banana being contaminated, for he is as safe as an egg inside his skin. Now the big thing about bananas is the large amount of glucose they contain. For glucose is quickly assimilated, and is converted into energy.

Full of Vitamins

AND the amount of energy that gets used up during the summer months workers, as well as holiday-makers, know.

Bananas are specially good for children, as the glucose is a preventive of that tiresome digestive complaint acidosis, which accounts for the peevishness, irritability and sickness of so many children.

Apart from glucose, bananas contain plenty of Vitamin C, as well as the growth-forming Vitamins A and B, which are so essential to good health and well-being.

Fortunately, everybody likes bananas. There has to be no tempting or disguising. "Bananas neat" is the holiday-maker's maxim, and it's a hard one to beat.

Not that bananas aren't good mixers. Try one fried with the bacon in the morning, or mashed up with a little milk and a poached egg on top.

Complete Meal

THERE are dozens of ways a housewife can knock up a meal with a few bananas as the base in a short time.

I need not tell you what good sandwiches they make. A slice of well-buttered Allinson bread that's made from the finest British wheat, a spread of mashed banana (a good thick spread, too), and there's a meal for you, with more energy and goodness in it than a hefty beef steak.

A wholemeal sandwich with a banana filling is the ideal supper for a child as well as a stand-by meal for a healthy hiker.

As for fruit salads, it is surprising how the bulk and nourishment are increased by the addition of some finely sliced bananas.

You may question that last remark about an ideal supper for a child, and repeat "an old wives' tale that they are not digestible."

Believe me, it is an "old tale."

SUMMER FOOD... FOR HEALTH & ENERGY

By Mrs. Bardell

The glucose in a banana supplies the energy which summer days consume. For a real meal try a banana in a wholemeal sandwich.

Maybe it was true in days gone by when the cultivation of bananas was left to chance and their transport and storing in the elementary stage.

Honey Ripe

BUT now, the care and culture of bananas is a science, and providing a banana is ripe a one-year-old can easily digest it.

You know when it is ripe, of course. Being yellow is not sufficient. There must be a little browning at the end and a general freckling of the skin. A banana at its best is honey ripe and the flavour is more mellow and generally delicious.

With this lovely Nature's food at hand, aren't we silly to bother about so much cooking?

Make up your mind to have a weekly banana order; just as you do the bread and the milk.

Restored Energy

HAVE a special banana corner in the larder. And when you are tired yourself in the middle of the morning with the household chores, five minutes' rest and a golden ripe banana pulled from the bunch will soon replace the energy you have expended during the past few hours.

The children won't have to be tempted to eat bananas. They like them far too well, and if sometimes the bunch gets reduced in size rather more quickly than you expected by young visitors between meals, it doesn't matter.

You know they couldn't have better food, no matter if it is eaten under a haystack instead of at a meal-table.

Experiment
with it

You've only to change your style of hairdressing or make-up, and you change your personality. You look different—feel different. Perhaps you're like this girl with a long, thin face. You can, if you wish—

ARE YOU TIRED OF YOUR FACE?

—accentuate this characteristic by brushing your hair upwards from the sides of the forehead into high curls, and then letting a light fringe of curls fall across the middle of the forehead.

For make-up, place your rouge high, starting from the temples, and pluck your eyebrows lightly at the extremities. As a second experiment try——pulling your hair in the middle, and drawing it up high from the sides of the face into big curls. This will give your face a more distinguished outline. You can modify the length of the face by placing the rouge well in the middle of the cheekbones. Try with this lightly-curved eyebrows, slightly thicker in the middle than at the extremities.

Diseases of the Nails

I GET many inquiries as to the cause and treatment of different diseases of the nails.

The commonest appears to be an inflammation of the structure round the nails, which is generally known as a whitlow.

When the inflammation is quite superficial it soon heals up and very little damage is done, but if the infection involves the bed of the nail pus forms and the nail drops off in time.

The cause of the trouble is generally due to a germ which enters the skin through some tear or foreign body in it.

Again, if there is any other infection of the hands or skin, or if the person is in a run-down condition or tubercular, whitlow frequently occurs.

SOAKING in hot water containing some small amount of antiseptic, such as Dettol or Lysol, will help to draw out the inflammation. This should be carried out every four hours. If the nail is badly affected it will have to be removed and warm fomentations applied.

The general health should be attended to and a good iron tonic taken.

NEW MYSTERIOUS DRUG IS REPORTED

Peyote Said To Reveal Glories Of Heaven

STATEMENT TO U.S. CONGRESS

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Staff Correspondent

Washington, June 12. THE United States Congress recently learned about Peyote, a drug of such mysterious power that the red man who partakes of it not only believes he sees the glories of heaven, but feels that he actually is in contact with God.

While members of a Congressional Committee hunched forward, fascinated, Indian Affairs Commissioner, John Collier told the story of the drug whose amazing effects caused Mexican Indians ages ago to base the whole religious faith upon it. This peyote faith has spread to the United States.

Peyote, Collier said, is a product of cactus, which has so interested the scientific world that nearly 300 books have been written about it—and the scientists still are mystified. "Its action physiologically, is to modify the behaviour of the vision of the brain, so that one sees beautiful colours and a man sees himself in the happy hunting ground, and sees the glories of heaven," he continued. "It produces a feeling of general well-being, so that the Indian user feels he is in contact with God."

Peyote, he said, is not habit forming and has among other things, the effect of checking all sexual emotions.

"The peculiar thing is this," he added, "if you or I take it, we do not get the same effect as the Indian gets when he takes it. During the Peyote ceremony, which lasts all night with the beating of drums and the reciting of prayers, he gets a different reaction than you or I."

In centuries past, he said, peyote became a sacred object to the Indians of Old Mexico. They connected with it a complicated religious ritual and moral code. It still is a religion of Pacifism, of non-resistance. It prohibits its members from touching alcohol, forces them to remain monogamous, and it is built around the use of the drug as a sacrament.

In 1870 the Peyote faith spread into the United States, commencing with the Mesquero Apaches in New Mexico, and moving north slowly as far as Montana and Utah. By 1910 there were more than 13,000 American Indian adherents of the faith which based its tenets upon the drug.

The famous Indian massacre of 1891, when the army surrounded a Sioux tribe in South Dakota and killed nearly every man, woman and child, occurred during a peyote ceremony.

Collier said the soldiers were fearful of the Indians, got out of hand, and started shooting them down with canister, without orders from headquarters. There still are living headquartens. There still are living headquartens. There still are living headquartens.

The commissioner said the cactus from which the drug is obtained grows wild in the southwest and even has been grown experimentally in the Washington Botanical Gardens. Despite the tremendous bibliography on peyote, Collier said there still remained much to be learned about its physiological and social effects and that he had asked the Rockefeller Foundation for help in studying it further.—United Press.

Insurance Provided Against Hole In One

Auckland, June 10. Golfers in Auckland need not worry about the cost of drinks in the clubhouse after holing in one.

EDWARD VIII STAMPS NOT WITHDRAWN

A SUGGESTION that no more stamps bearing the portrait of King Edward VIII will be issued and that surplus stocks are to be destroyed is untrue, an official of the General Post Office stated recently.

"When the issue of the Coronation stamp ends next month," he said, "a new George VI. three-halfpenny stamp will be introduced."

"If sheets of King Edward VIII. three-halfpenny stamps remain unsold then it is proposed that they shall be destroyed because the supply of all the other Edward stamps will be exhausted."

"It will be possible to buy them in book form afterwards until the whole supply has gone."

ATLANTIC AIR SERVICE STRUGGLE DEVELOPS

FRANCE, GERMANY MAY COMPETE

BRITAIN & U.S. THREATENED

By Sander S. Klein
United Press Staff Correspondent

Washington, June 12. CONSUMMATION of a British-American trans-Atlantic air service agreement has aroused new interest in establishing competition lines.

It was also learned that Dutch aviation interests, now operating in South America, have made unofficial inquiries here on a proposal to extend service from the northern part of South America to Florida.

The French originally broached their proposal in an informal way about a year ago. It was dropped, it was understood, because of controversy in France as to whether the French terminus should be Paris or Bordeaux.

Recently, however, "indications" have been received here that led government officials to anticipate renewed conversations with the French.

Germany's trans-Atlantic hopes are in a more advanced state. The Reich has obtained a foothold here through its dirigible service with the Zeppelin Hindenburg. It also conducted experimental flights over the Atlantic with two "catapult" seaplanes operating from a mother ship, the Swabenland.

Commerce Department officials said they awaited a request from Germany for an extension of privileges to land in New York in connection with a revival of the experimental flights.

Col. J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said he understood that Pan-American Airways and the British Imperial Airways will begin experimental flights within a few months. Pan-American will use the Clipper type ships now on the trans-Pacific line for the pioneer flights but plan to use a new type Boeing flying boat, now under construction, in regular service.

Recently, the Commerce Department was advised that application for permission to establish a trans-Atlantic air service to the European continent would be made shortly by the Curtiss Martin Aircraft Company of Baltimore.

The Pan-American-British Imperial service would be by way of Canada, and with an alternate southern route through Bermuda and the Azores.

The United States, it was indicated, frowned on the Dutch proposal on the ground that present facilities, operated by Pan-American Airways, are adequate.

The government tentatively rejected a request made by the Netherlands government in behalf of the Royal Netherlands Indies Aviation Co.—the Kmlim—for permission to extend service from Surabaya, Java, to Manila. The U.S. government pointed out that additional time was needed to work out details and also that consideration must be given to the attitude of the Philippines government.—United Press.

Mr. Winston Churchill whose craze for head-coverings is well known, recently got a new one, namely the engine-driver's, when he christened a new railway engine. Here we see the politician standing on the engine after the ceremony.

EXCHANGE OF FILM STARS

ANGLO-AMERICAN PACT TO BE RESUMED

The inter-change of star between English and American studios, brought almost to a standstill by the recent crisis in the British film industry, will shortly recommence on a considerable scale.

For 18 months—up to the end of 1935—Hollywood artists of the highest rank were eager to accept offers to appear in British films. The companies to which they were under contract, realising that producers in this country were achieving a new and improved standard of output, gladly "loaned" their players' services for one or more English pictures.

Then, early this year, came the financial crash. The closing down of the Gaumont-British studios at Shepherd's Bush, followed by the failure of numerous independent producing concerns, virtually ended the whole-scale importation of highly-paid actors from abroad. It also terminated many reciprocal agreements, under which English artists would have gone to Hollywood to make films.

COLOUR FILM DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Alexander Korda's latest deal, which gives him, with Mr. Samuel Goldwyn, control of the powerful United Artists Corporation, will lead to an immediate resumption of the system of exchanging talent. Mr. Korda will be able to "borrow" Hollywood's most eminent players for his forthcoming films at the Denham studios, while Mr. Goldwyn, will have first call on the services of English artists under contract to London Films.

Not until Mr. Korda returns from his Hollywood visit will the film industry in Great Britain learn the full implications of his deal. All that is known at present is that he and Mr. Goldwyn have, for a sum estimated at £1,200,000, bought out the holdings in the United Artists Corporation of three of its founder and producer members, Mr. Charles Chaplin, Mr. Douglas Fairbanks, sen., and Miss Mary Pickford.

In one stroke he has placed himself on a par with the most influential producers in America, and has guaranteed world distribution of his Denham films on highly advantageous terms.

By reason of the wider exchange of talent and closer co-operation of interests between London Films and United Artists which will follow the deal, and also because it must give a fresh impetus to the development of colour films. Wardour-street halls Mr. Korda's achievement as one of the most important events in the cinema world during the past five years.

OUR GUIDE TO THE CINEMAS

"When You're In Love" (King's Theatre, to-day).—It's hard to praise this film without given the impression of indulging in excessive adulation. But that it is one of the nicest pictures Hongkong has enjoyed for a long while will be generally conceded. Grace Moore is in best form, and sings a much wider variety of numbers than hitherto. If you have already seen the picture, you will probably want to do so again.

"Roberta" (Queen's Theatre, to-day).—Here is really one of the Old Favorites. The writer has always ranked this as the best of the Rogers-Astair pictures, not the least being that they have with them such an ideal supporting cast. Irene Dunne makes a beautiful number of "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes," and as for Ginger Rogers and Fred Astair, they surpass themselves.

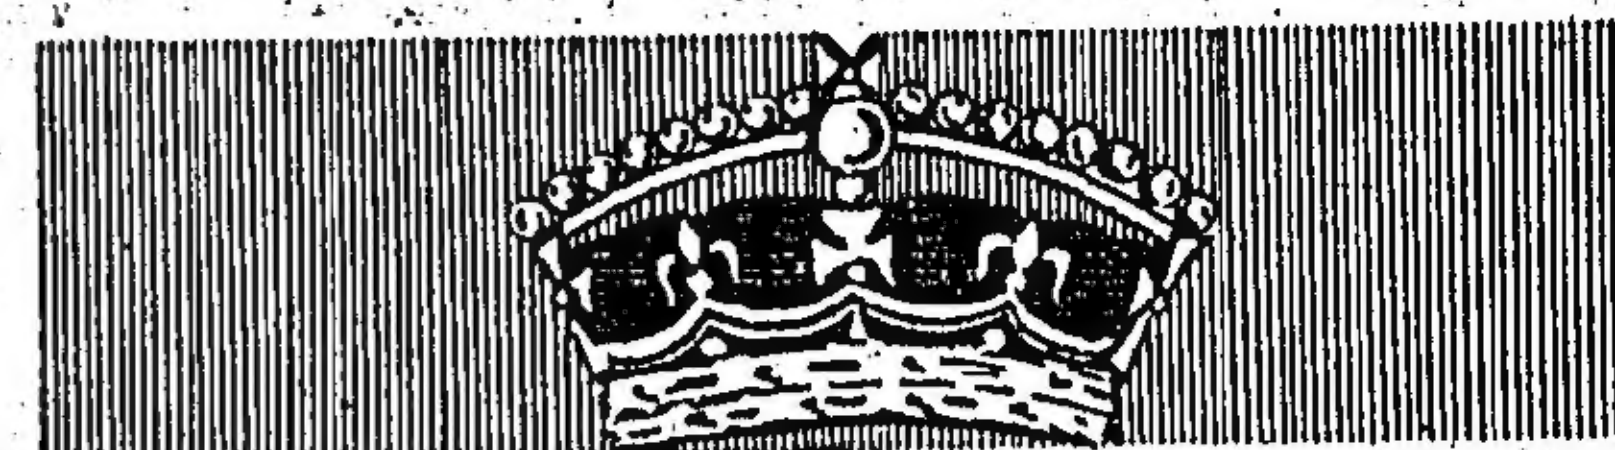

"20 Million Sweethearts" (Majestic Theatre, to-day).—Admirers of Dick Powell will thoroughly enjoy this offering, which is greatly enhanced by the presence of vivacious Ginger Rogers. A first-rate Warner Bros. musical romance.

"When Knights Were Bold" (Star Theatre, to-day).—Excellent vehicle for that Prince Charming of light comedians and expert tap-dancer, Jack Buchanan. Fay Wray is also much happier in this picture, and away from the customary blood-curdling roles she has to adopt.

"The First Baby" (Alhambra Theatre, to-day).—Amusing little sketch, which gives half a dozen rising young actors good chances of showing their talents. Film features Johnny Downs, Shirley Deane, Dickie Dunbar, Jane Darwell, Marjorie Gateason and Gene Lockhart.

"Dracula's Daughter" (Oriental Theatre, to-day).—Serious but exciting sequel to "Dracula," with first-class performances by Gloria Holden, Otto Kruger and others. The timing is perfect and the suspense with its dramatic climax thrillingly sustained.

STILL of first importance in choosing a whisky is the question of brewing, age and quality. You need have no qualms about choosing King George IV.

It is one of the finest whiskies in the world to-day.

"There's no question about it Craven 'A' never affect your throat"

I THINK I first smoked Craven 'A' because a friend told me that they wouldn't stain my fingers or lips. But I soon found out that this was not the only good thing about these cigarettes. Their coolness and freedom from throat irritation made a world of difference to my smoking pleasure. Why don't you try Craven 'A' yourself. I know you'll be glad you made the change.

IN "EASY-ACCESS" INNER FOIL PACKETS, ALSO IN "TRU-VAC" "50" TINS. When we seal the TRU-VAC airtight TIN the FACTORY FRESHNESS OF CRAVEN 'A' is actually impregnated into the end of the cigarette, so that the end is broken by pulling the rubber tab—no cutting or jagged edges.

Cut In Taxes Necessitates Retrenchment

Canton, July 2.
In a statement to the press, Mayor Tseng Yang-fu, who is also Commissioner of Finance for Kwangtung, announced to-day that the provincial budget for the 26th fiscal year shows a shortage of over $10,000,000 for Administration expenditure. This was due to the abolition of many miscellaneous taxes.
The Administration's expenditure has increased by over $30,000,000, he said. But the budget must be balanced. Mayor Tseng declared this could only be accomplished by retrenchment in various Government departments.
The Government had wiped out over 600 taxes and would continue to eradicate such as were found harsh. The Finance Department had already sent investigators to various districts to study the tax situation, he added.—Reuter.

HE gave her a Tek Shorthead to prove to her how much better it is than an ordinary toothbrush. The Tek Shorthead is cut to measure and cut to clean, and was designed by dental experts to fit the arch behind the teeth exactly. This means that the tartar coat at the back of the teeth is thoroughly cleaned, and every single crevice is probed from behind.

The Tek was approved by 90% of the dentists to whom it was sent. There's nothing just as good as Tek. Tek is registered—legally protected from imitation. Women who want their teeth thoroughly clean need Tek, the original shorthead Toothbrush.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE SWAN, CULBERTSON & FRITZ LATEST REPORTS

New York, July 1

S. C. & F. Dow Jones Summary of yesterday's market.—Although not pressed, the main list was extended as a result of the toning up of the steel labour situation, with the possibility that the truce with the Inland Steel Company is the forerunner of a general strike settlement. Trading was restricted in anticipation of nervousness over the holidays. Chrysler provided part of a late mild selling move. Oils were prominent. Amusements were in demand. The market heartened on reports of contruction awards and the likelihood of an increase in car-loadings, although traders are nervous regarding the French and Russo-Japanese situations. Curb stocks and bonds, including Government issues, were all higher.

S. C. & F. Wall Street Journal Morning Comment.—There are more possible buyers than sellers around the Street, but traders are cautious. The month of July has shown more market rises than declines for the last 30 years. Bulls are of the opinion that U. S. Steel will consider the payment of common dividends in the third quarter.

S. C. & F. New York Office Cables: Stock: The market continues to reflect the somewhat improved sentiment, but there is lack of aggressive following on rallies. Provided news remains favourable, the present market seems likely to form a base from which a good-sized recovery could be had. There are likely to be weak spells from time to time, however, and it might prove unwise to follow the current strength too far. From a trading stand-point, it should prove a good policy to accept profits on any further strength, with the idea of replacing stocks on recessions.

Cotton: The market was affected largely by the late up-turn in wheat prices. Offerings were light, after early selling. Professor Kemmerer is quoted as saying that potential inflationary forces are operating and he predicts a rise in commodity prices.

Wheat: Black rust damage reports from the Central Belt are about equalled by denials of damage, but the former have more effect on the market. The Canadian situation is the chief bullish factor and the condition of the crop there is apparently serious, with estimates of the Western crop ranging from 180,000,000 to 190,000,000 bushels. With the possibility of an increased export demand, there is a growing belief that the large yields in our own South-West will off-set the rust damage to the Winter crop. The present Russo-Japanese dispute is an underlying factor in the strength of the market. Private estimates to-morrow of the domestic crop are expected to be around 650,000,000 bushels. There are intentions to deliver 55,000 bushels.

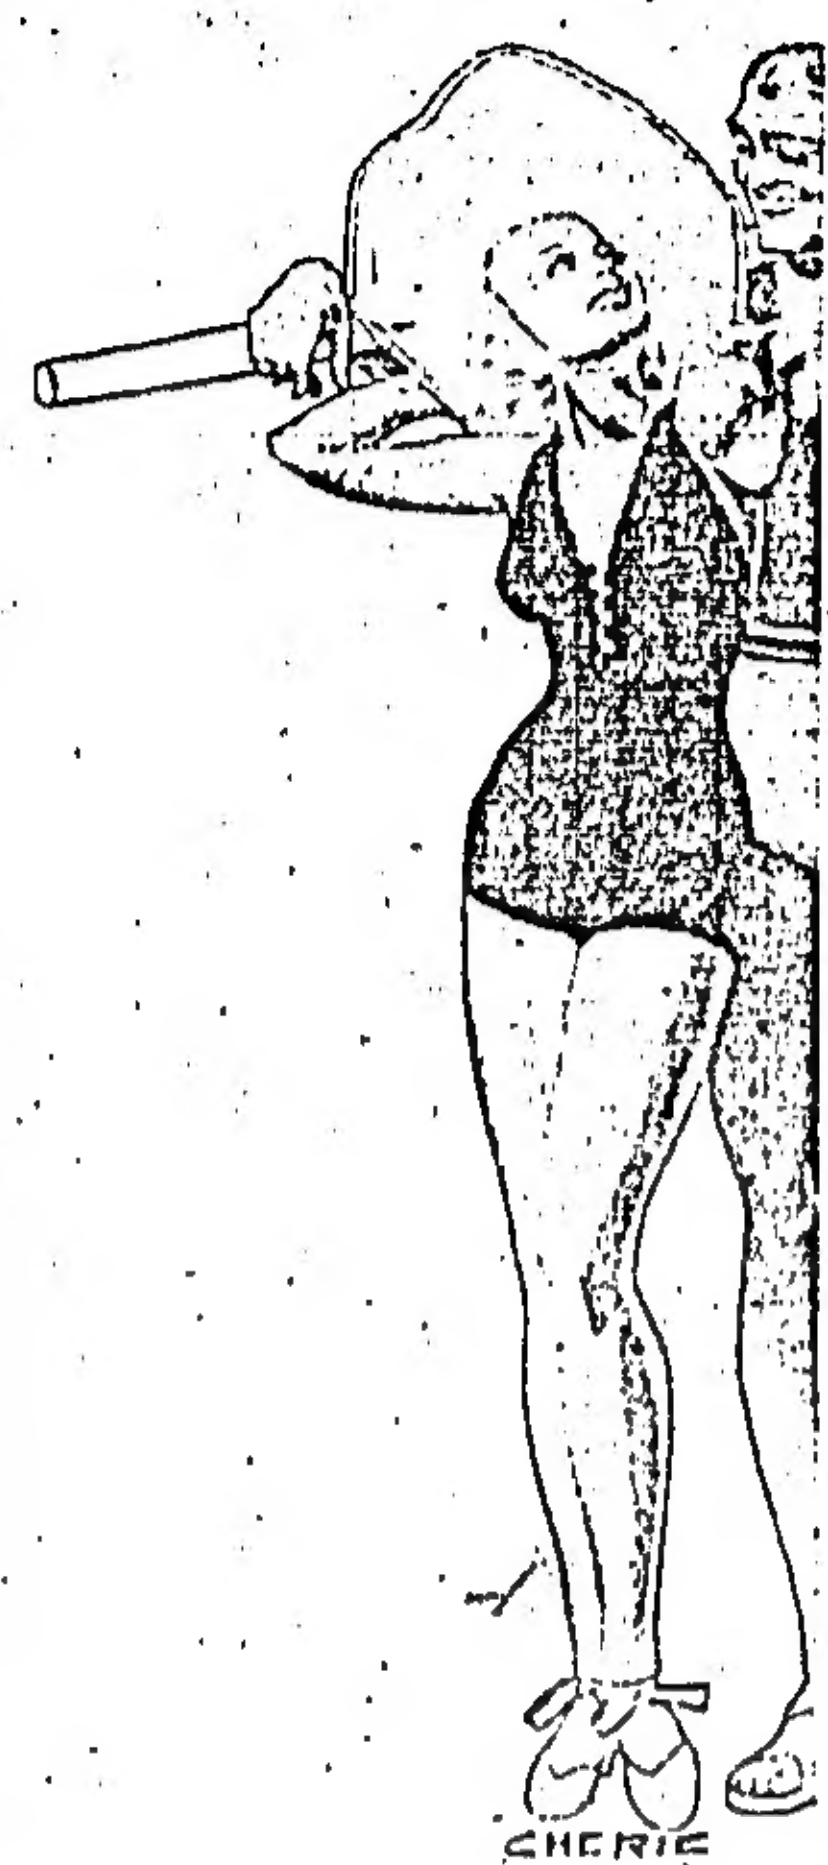

Rubber: There was some broad foreign and commission-house buying, which was attributed to the easing of the tension in the French monetary situation. Malayan exports for May amounted to 33,099 tons. Dutch exports for the same month totalled 38,568 tons and exports from other sources were 7,076 tons.

Sugar: The market was firm and active. There was some European buying, particularly of distant positions.

Good For 'Griffins' And 'Old Timers' Too.

The new-come to the East is generally besieged with advice as to how to keep fit—much of which is often contradictory. But, on one important point all are agreed, the necessity for regularity in the daily habit. Constipation must be avoided, for this is one of the chief causes of ill-health.

Pinkettes, tiny pink laxative pills, are just the thing to keep you regular. Taken when needed, they dispeise constipation, tone up the liver, aid digestion, correct biliousness and sick headaches, purify the breath, clear the skin, relieve piles. Chemists everywhere sell this convenient, all vegetable laxative, which acts as gently as nature.

BRITISH COTTON INDUSTRY

Although the British cotton industry has not the hold in Eastern markets which it enjoyed for many long years, the magnificent display in the textile section of the recent British Industries Fair clearly demonstrated that it is still able to hold its own against foreign competitors. The collective exhibit arranged on one stand and offering a choice of more than three hundred different fine cotton dress fabrics was in itself an achievement, and it fully revealed the indomitable spirit of an industry which, despite the most severe and protracted trade depression, has continued to pursue co-operative research on a large scale in order to ensure that the quality of fine British cotton goods shall remain unsurpassed. The Cotton Research Association possesses one of the largest and best equipped research stations in the country. It is called the Shirley Institute and is established on the outskirts of Manchester, which is the headquarters of Great Britain's cotton industry. The buildings of the station cover an area of over three acres, their cost being well over £200,000. The tendency of all modern industry is towards scientific methods and research, both on the administrative and productive side, and that the cotton industry fully endorses the modern view may be judged by the fact that the staff of the Shirley Institute, which fifteen years ago numbered twenty-five, has now risen to 270. So great are the demands on the services of the research station that new buildings are constantly being added, the latest addition including large weaving sheds for experiments with cotton and rayon, under varying degrees of humidity and heat. Another field in which research is being carried out vigorously aims at ascertaining the effects of light on dyed cotton fabrics, as it has been found that some dyes apparently help to protect the fabric from the influence of strong lights whilst others have the exactly opposite effect. There is evidence in this sphere of research work of a careful study of conditions which might be encountered in overseas markets. Whatever the shortcomings of the industry in the past, the spirit of enterprise and attention to important detail now animating those at its head give great promise for the future. Above all, there is ample assurance of quality in British products, even in the grades in which competition is most severe.

DOWNING STREET PORTRAIT

N. Chamberlain, LIMITED

by Harold Laski

"From Mr. Chamberlain we shall get some years of characteristic Tory rule" range, he has the historic Chamberlain realization that social problems are urgent. He is an efficient administrator, who rapidly becomes the master of the Department over which he presides.

It is well known that Mr. Baldwin drove his Cabinet on a local rein; under Mr. Chamberlain, I do not think there will be any doubt of where the ultimate control lies.

BUT he has grave defects. He is not an imaginative person. His principles are profoundly held, but their scope is narrow. He has never been tempted to their examination; it never occurs to him that they may be legitimately doubted. He approaches all his problems from the somewhat commonplace assumptions of the average business man.

He has what William James called habit without philosophy. He believes in being practical; but his view of what is practical is wholly limited by his own narrow experience. He has little ability to penetrate the minds of other people. He is contemptuous of opposition to his own essentials. He rarely can be persuaded to see any other side of the case but his own.

There is nothing daring or experimental about him. He has the courage of an obstinate man who has made his bargain with destiny; he would never admit that the bargain can be reopened. His social outlook was formed thirty years ago, when his father was the uncrowned King of Birmingham, and it has never altered.

There are people who regard Mr. Chamberlain as a reactionary. That is not I think quite fair. His purposes are high purposes; he would give his life to make a great Empire.

But the forces to which he looks to make the Empire great, the forces of which he is himself the expression and the representative, are, in fact, its most reactionary forces.

THEY have none of that magnanimity which Burke declared indispensable to the successful working of an empire. They confound the volume of the trade returns with the volume of happiness.

They are either ignorant of how the masses live, or convinced that the masses would be content to live that way if it were not for agitators. They have no vision of what Geneva might mean, or what Soviet Russia does mean.

They think of the new forces afoot in the world exactly as their progenitors thought of the French Revolution. Quite sincerely, they identify their private welfare with the public well-being.

That is how Mr. Chamberlain thinks. That he so thinks with profound sincerity no one who has watched him at work will deny. There is nothing in him of Mr. Baldwin's occasional imaginative insight. There is not an atom of President Roosevelt's daring.

The man who got the municipal bank for Birmingham does not see why any other city should have its municipal bank also; and he is genuinely surprised that his attitude should cause surprise.

The man who cancelled the American debt thinks that "even the Middle West" can understand the grounds of his action; he is amazed that the Middle West should resent his contemptuous reference.

If he had moments of instinctive and imaginative generosity, he might see wider perspectives than those which open to him. But the man who, in making the Ottawa agreement, laid so much of the world's economic well-being as a wreath upon the tomb of his father's memory does not speculate upon foundations.

SO that from Mr. Chamberlain we shall get some years of characteristic Tory rule. There will be little of the plea for mutual understanding by which Mr. Baldwin sweetened even defeat for his opponents. Mr. Chamberlain is, in the Bismarckian sense, a man who plays real politics.

His class is in power; while he is there he will do all he can to see that it keeps its power. He will not even be anxious, as Mr. Baldwin was anxious, to maintain unimpaired the special compromises of our political system.

His conception of political democracy does not include the extension of its principles to the economic sphere as well. He has even forgotten the doctrine of ransom—the rich man's privileges by the social services he helps to pay for in return—which his father preached so stoutly in the 'seventies. Or, rather, perhaps, his conception of the limits of ransom is that set by the business community's conception of what it can afford.

HIS attitude to excess profits shows clearly enough that the one thing he would wish to avoid is disturbance of the confidence of business men. For him, they are the essence of the community, as Macaulay thought the middle classes the "natural representatives of the human race."

Mr. Chamberlain, indeed, will be our first middle-class Prime Minister in capitalist democracy's period of economic contraction. Mr. Asquith was a lawyer of Whig views; Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and Mr. Baldwin were rentiers rather than business men.

With Mr. Chamberlain, the true philosophy of the business man will be at last resident at 10, Downing Street. With his accession to the supreme office, problems will be examined as a business man looks at the balance sheet of a company. There will be honesty, precision, energy. But the times call for imagination, for vision, for experimentalism. I do not see these qualities in Mr. Chamberlain.

That is why I cannot regard his Premiership without apprehension. He is the expression of an outlook at war with all the new hopes that are striving for expression in our day.

SCHOOLBOY RAGGING

By A VICTIM

WHEREVER those of the old school are gathered together, there will be talk of the famous rags that took place in the old days.

The occasions that are recalled are not the ones when the boys simply made a noise or were allowed to do exactly as they liked by some soft-hearted or soft-headed master. To be remembered a rag must have something of artistry in it.

For instance, one master was taking his class in the usual way—rather a noisy way, he it said—when two bearded figures entered, muffled up in hats and coats so that their features were hardly visible. They claimed to be the plumbers, and that they had work to do in that very room.

Not content with this, the two boys carried the rag still further by actually pulling up one of the floorboards over the pipes. They then produced hammers and hanged merrily on the pipes for the rest of the lesson, timing the beat nicely to coincide with the unfortunate master's efforts to instruct the form. It is said that the poor man never found out the truth.

Another master had so little control over his pupils that he could not even make them stay in the room during the whole of his period. He made the following entry in the punishment book, "For getting out of window during lesson."

This man's life was made a burden to him in many ingenious ways. He was a science teacher, a fact which gave the more enterprising boys plenty of scope. "You know, it's a most extraordinary thing," he used to say, "I go up and down between benches, and when I come to the end I find that my gown is in knots behind."

Behind the Blackboard

A senior master in a famous public school was once set a problem in tact. He heard a tremendous uproar in one of the class-rooms, and set out to investigate it, thinking the master could not be there.

As he entered the room there was an instant hush. The senior master glanced round to behold his colleague emerge stealthily from behind the blackboard, where he had taken refuge from his class.

Such stories may seem difficult to believe. Most of us remember the power wielded by the master. But the fact is that no punishment will stop a boy from ragging once he has made up his mind that a certain master is a suitable victim.

It is really only personality and not threat of punishment that is the secret of discipline, and anyone could be ragged if all the boys agreed on it.

A concerted effort is the most difficult to stop, such as all the boys tapping on the desk, or all coming into form with Woolworth spectacles on, a feat actually performed.

All Fools

April 1st is naturally a day which presents great opportunities to the boys. An ingenious form of catch is the following:—

A selected boy waits until the master is well settled in his chair and has begun the lesson, and then taps on the under side of the desk, imitating a knock at the door. If the unsuspecting man looks up he sees the words "April Fool" chalked in large letters on one of the inside panels.

One master was so incredibly thoughtless as to leave in his form room long glass tubes and a good supply of plasticene. Their proper use was for a model, but the boys had other ideas, and the bombardment proceeded merrily through the next lesson.

Judicious use of a Bunsen burner flame during science periods will provide plenty of amusement. Glass tubing may be made very hot without changing its appearance, and the master is then persuaded to pick it up.

All the ragging is not on the boys' side. A certain schoolmaster, who was a keen cricketer, "used to announce punishment with 'To-night we're going to have a game. I'm going to bat first, and then rain will stop play!'"

Another master's methods were less ferocious and less effective. He used to climb up to the ventilator and say, "Look out, you chaps; the headmaster's coming!"

It must not be thought that such things happen to all masters. Only a small minority are favoured with these attentions, and with the new efficiency in schools even that minority is dwindling.

By-gone Marriage Notices

COPIES of the "Scots Magazine" of a hundred to a hundred and fifty years ago will yield much amusing entertainment to anyone who cares to look through them for wedding notices. These bygone marriage notices were much more interesting than their modern counterparts, mainly owing to the particulars of the parties that were given.

Despair between the ages of the bride and bridegroom is not unknown nowadays, but surely the difference of eighty years mentioned in the following notice must constitute a record:—

"Robert Judge Esq., of Cooksburgh, Ireland, aged 95, to Miss Ann Nugent, aged 15. He served in King William's wars, and received a ball in his nose."

The height of the wedded couple was frequently given, accompanied by other interesting details, such as their age, fortune, and even the length of courtship. The "tall and short of it" marriage is well represented in the following:—

"December (1775.) At York. Mr. Thomas, a grenadier in the Yorkshire militia, 6 feet 2 inches high, to Miss Hannah Tennick of Cleburn, 6 feet 2 inches high, with a fortune of £5,000."

A marriage notice of 1779, relating to a couple aged 80 and 85, concludes thus:—

"And what is still more remarkable, there has been a courtship carried on betwixt them for more than sixty years."

Then there was the much-married man, who was quite unable to recollect a deceased wife's name:—

November 3 (1775.) At Dalkeith, David Wilson, journeyman gardener, to Catherine Craw, aged 40, his fifth wife. He is 71 years of age. His first wife was a Dutchwoman, whose name he has forgotten; the others were Scotswomen."

Novelists in need of material to make a really entertaining story may be interested in the two following notices:—

"July 26 (1775.) John Kerrder, a labourer and married man, was impressed as a soldier in the year 1741, became a French prisoner, but made his escape, and settled in Germany, where he married and buried two wives. After thirty-three years absence, he came to England, and found his first wife by mere accident last week selling fruit in Oxford Road. She had buried two husbands in the time; and being both disengaged they willingly renewed their former connection."

"February (1785.) At Newcastle, Mr. Silvertop, to Mrs. Pearson. This is the third time this lady has been before the altar in the character of a bride, and there has been something remarkable in each of her three connubial engagements. Her first husband was a Quaker; her second, a Roman Catholic; and her third, a Protestant of the Established Church. Every husband was twice her age; at sixteen she married a gentleman of 32; at 30, she took one of 60, and now, at 42, she is united to a gentleman of 64."

NEED FOR WAR RESERVE OF MINERALS

May Bring Heavy U.S. Buying Soon

OFFICIAL CONCERN OVER SHORTAGE

By Gratian McGroarty
United Press Staff Correspondent

Washington. Official concern over shortage of strategic raw materials necessary for adequate national defence may result in large government purchases in foreign markets of minerals not produced in the United States.

Representatives of the State, War, Navy and Treasury Departments have held several conferences recently to discuss means of alleviating this situation, which military and naval experts regard as extremely dangerous in event of a major conflict involving the United States.

First move to remedy the shortage was made by Congress in enactment recently of the 1938 Naval Appropriation Act which carried an initial appropriation of $5,500,000 for the purpose of building up the nation's supply of strategic raw materials.

The House Appropriation Committee followed this further and in its report accompanying the War Department Appropriation Act said, "It is the considered judgment of the committee that any reserve plan should take into consideration the building up of a reasonably adequate supply of strategic raw materials."

Rep. James G. Scrugham, in a statement to the committee, said the weakest point in the American defence system is its dependence upon foreign sources for continued supplies of these materials:

Chromite, having origin in Rhodesia, Cuba, Greece, India and to some extent in the Philippine Islands, is indispensable to the steel industry.

Tin, found mostly in the Malay States, Dutch East Indies, Bolivia, Siam and China and used extensively in airplane construction, bearings, cables, solder, bomb fuses and castings.

Tungsten, originating chiefly in China, Bolivia and Burma and used for high speed cutting tools in all kinds of machine work.

Nickel, having origin in Canada and New Caledonia and used in steel for making guns and armour plate.

Antimony, originating in China, Bolivia and Mexico and used for bearing metal, battery plates, paint and chemicals.

Manganese, found chiefly in Russia, Bolivia, Brazil, India, Cuba, Gold Coast of Africa and Egypt and used for propeller hubs, propeller blades, engine frames, gears, gun mount castings and torpedoes.

Quicksilver, originating in Italy and Spain and used for explosives, paints, drugs and electrical apparatus.

Optical glass, found in Germany and France and used for binoculars, periscopes, cameras, telescopes, and range finders.

Rep. Scrugham recommended that in so far as possible the United States obtain stores of these materials from domestic sources, but warned that present shortage is dangerous.

"The fundamental naval and military policy of the United States contemplates that the War and Navy Departments should co-operate with other departments of the government in encouraging civil industries and activities useful in war," Rep. Scrugham said.

"Recent action by the Army and Navy Joint Board, which has received the approval of the Secretary of War and Secretary of Navy, recommends the prompt acquisition of stock piles of strategic raw materials to insure adequate preparation for national defence."

"Consideration of the national aspect of this problem has recently led to several informal conferences between representatives of the States, Treasury, War and Navy Departments."

"Probably the weakest point in the military programme of the nation has been the dependence upon foreign sources of supply for many of the strategic minerals necessary for military and construction purposes."

"The policy of accumulation of reserve stocks of strategic minerals of domestic origin is recommended by the National Resources Board in its recent report to the President."

Scrugham recommended that the House Appropriations Committee incorporate in the next War Department budget an item sufficiently large for the purchase and storage of adequate supplies of critical and strategic raw materials, in so far as practicable to be of domestic origin and processed in the United States."

Husband Eats Raw Meat, Wife Wins Divorce Suit

Worcester, Mass., June 15. Mrs. Elsie Swanson, seeking a divorce, complained that her husband was a "cave man."

She told the judge that to show his "brute strength" he once tore out the bathroom plumbing.

He ate raw meat, too, said she.

The divorce was granted.—United Press.

DYING ABORIGINAL TRIBE DISCOVERED

Singapore,

A visit to a dying people, the Negrito aborigines of Malaya, is described by a survey officer in the annual report of the surveyor-general that has been published here.

Among the whole tribe, he wrote, there was only one baby, and, its mother being ill, it was apparently left to fend for itself. He concluded that these small, black, sturdy, fuzzy-headed people, the most primitive in Malaya, soon will be extinct.

With a goodwill offering of dried fish, salt, and cigarettes, the officer set out to visit a Negrito camp. He found it to consist of about half a dozen shelters made by placing sticks in the ground, bending them over till they met and laying palm leaves on the top of the arch.

The Negroes gather round him, running along the branches of trees and swinging from bough to bough like monkeys.

"Shy and uneasy at first," he writes, "a distribution of cigarettes soon made them approachable and friendly, but never gregarious. As a concession they had draped themselves in bits of old sarongs, sacking, anything in fact to hide their complete nudity, but these uncustomed garments soon irked and were put aside for another occasion."

"After much persuasion and bribery, the women agreed to entertain me with dancing. This consisted of rhythmic movements of the arms, shoulders and hips with a bit of marking time thrown in for good measure. The music was supplied by an elderly matron who sat stamping two lengths of bamboo on the ground."

"They understood very little Malay, and counting went up to three, apparently—one, two, many." The patriarch of the tribe, in answer to my question as to the number of his wives, replied "Banyak" (many), and seemed to believe that he was telling me in definite terms just how many wives he possessed.—United Press.

Clergy Fear a 'Gretna Green Diocese'

"A DIOCESE well known for its indulgence might become a sort of Gretna Green to which those who cannot be married in another diocese would habitually resort," said Dr. Sparrow Simpson (Chelmsford) when the Lower House of Convocation discussed at Westminster the question of remarriage after divorce. The Upper House also dealt with the subject.

Dr. Simpson was speaking on a resolution to enable the sacraments to be given to remarried divorcees if the bishop of the diocese was satisfied.

A resolution was carried: "That the Church should not allow the use of the marriage service in the case of anyone who has a partner still living."

An amendment that no person married according to the marriage service and afterwards remarried should be admitted to the sacraments and privileges of the Church unless by a special order of Convocation was defeated.

Canon Simpson (Coventry) said: "We shall be simply living in a fool's paradise if we don't see that people are making use of the register office precisely, because they don't accept the Christian view of marriage."

PETITION BY 1,874

The Rev. E. D. Merritt (St. Pancras) presented a petition with 1,874 signatures opposing the proposal for the admission to the sacraments of divorced persons remarried during the life-time of their former partners.

In the Upper House, the Bishop of St. Albans, Dr. Michael Furse, presented a petition with 1,874 signatures opposing the proposal for the admission to the sacraments of divorced persons remarried during the life-time of their former partners.

Nowadays it is just as natural to fly in airplane as to drive in a car. The girl seen above entering her airplane is the American aviatrix, Mrs. Louise Thaden, who recently set a new National record for women in the 100 kilometres race.

M.P. GOT "K.O." REFORMING "BLACK SHEEP"

A fight with bare knuckles and stripped to the waist, between himself and a young Territorial "black sheep" was described by Sir Robert Tasker, M.P., for Holborn.

He confirmed his statement during the House of Commons that "to deal effectively with certain men you have to give them a good hiding."

"Although it was I who got the licking and not the young Territorial—he was 20 years my junior—he was so ashamed of himself that he started to reform. He went to France, was promoted sergeant and became a model soldier," Sir Robert stated.

"It happened in 1915 when I was in command of a Territorial camp."

A REAL "BAD HAT"

"The man was a real 'bad hat.' We could do nothing with him. He had been dismissed the army for striking an officer on parade and was a bully."

"He got into trouble with the police and was brought before me. I was determined to reform him and gave him the choice of being tried by myself or a district court martial."

"I would rather you try me yourself, sir," he replied.

"Very well—we shall fight it out," was my response, and it was arranged that they should meet alone in a chalk pit.

When they got there he told the young man he was going to give him the hiding of his life.

"You don't know what you are taking on, sir, I shall half kill you," he replied.

Sir Robert said he was knocked out with a blow to the jaw but the private brought him round inquiring: "What will you tell me, sir?"

"You fell off your pony. I promise you'll have no more trouble with me."

Ten years ago while walking through the City he saw the "black sheep." He had a good job and was doing well.

Drinkwater MSS. Fetch Poor Prices

SURPRISINGLY low prices were realised for a number of John Drinkwater MSS. at an auction in London recently.

The sale—in the Bond Street rooms of Messrs. Puttick and Simpson—was the first since his death two months ago. Fourteen lots fetched a total of £27 15s.

Highest figure was £28 paid for a holograph in pencil of Drinkwater's "Robert E. Lee" and among other sums were £10 for "American Vignettes" and £10 for some poems included in "Summer Harvest" and

LABOUR IS TRYING TO CATCH MORE VOTES

The Socialist Party is about to embark on an intensive propaganda campaign designed to popularise its new short-term programme.

A special committee of the National Executive of the Party, which has been formed with Mr. Herbert Morrison as chairman, has set itself the objective of increasing the voting strength of the Party at the rate of one million a year. It aims also at securing a definite parliamentary "when the Government is forced to appeal to the electors."

Mr. Morrison explained to a conference of Press representatives the manner in which the Party seeks to achieve its objects.

"There will," he said, "be a long-term campaign in two stages. The first will lead up to the annual conference of the Party at Bournemouth next October. The second will carry on up to the time of the next General Election. There will be a crusade week in September, when there will be issued many special pamphlets in which Party leaders will deal with specific aspects of the Party's programme."

"National conferences are being organised with a view to mobilising in support of the campaign the Trade Unions, the Parliamentary Labour Party, Party agents and candidates."

"A conference will be held tomorrow at which Mr. C. R. Attlee (Leader of the Socialist Opposition in the House of Commons) will speak, while Mr. Arthur Greenwood, M.P. (Secretary of the Labour Party Research Department), will address a similar conference at Hull."

Mr. Morrison emphasised that the campaign would be no "flash in the pan" affair, but would be carried on until the Labour movement was assured of a solid majority in the House of Commons.

Among the leaders who will assist Mr. Morrison in the organisation of the campaign are Dr. Hugh Dalton, Mr. George Latham, and Mr. F. O. Roberts.

AT SEASIDE RESORTS

Eighty meetings are to be held during the holiday season at seaside resorts, where speakers will concentrate upon the furtherance of the "holidays with pay" feature of the Socialist programme. First meetings will be held at Brighton (Conservative majority at last election over 50,000), and at Worthing (Conservative majority nearly 40,000).

"One million copies of appropriate pamphlets have already been ordered," said at one penny per copy and will be distributed in handsome profit to the local organisations. They will be followed by a series of regular monthly leaflets and a journal which will be published periodically."

In 1936 the Conservative vote was 2,000,000 more than the Socialist.

Ship Is Cradle For 8 Admirals

San Diego, June 10. The "cradle of admirals" is the nickname applied by officers of the U. S. Navy here to the U. S. S. California, flagship of the battle force.

Men who have skippered the huge dreadnaught, which went into commission Aug. 10, 1921, have never failed to advance from the rank of captain to that of rear admiral and some of the navy's highest officers served their "apprenticeship" aboard the big craft—with one exception.

The three men distinguished "alumni" of the California were: Admiral William H. Standley, retired, who formerly was chief of naval operations; Admiral Claud C. Block, present Battle Force Commander, and Vice Admiral Edward Klabus, Battle Force Division Commander.

Capt. R. D. Hasbrouck, who died while he was serving as skipper of the California, is the only officer who did not become an admiral after his tour of duty aboard the vessel.

Naval officers feel reasonably certain the fact the California is flagship of the Battle Force, with a vice-admiral aboard, largely accounts for the fact her commanders are advanced to the high grades—the California by virtue of her position always is in the naval spotlight.

Capt. Henry J. Zimmerman was the California's first skipper, and he became rear admiral. Other captains who advanced from the bridge of the California to rate an admiral's stars in the order of their service aboard the ship were: A. Bostwick, H. H. Christy, Standley, Block, Klabus, Henry A. Lackel and Wilson Brown, now commander of the training squadron.

Capt. William L. Cathoun, now head of the 11th Naval district court martial here, becomes skipper of the California in June, having asked for and received the command—in itself an unusual thing.—United Press.

For two articles and a sonnet on George V. and George VI. Only £1 was paid for "The Poetry of the Seventies," a lecture he gave to the Royal Society of Literature, and £2 for the manuscript of his one-act play "Little Johnny." Only a few minutes before the manuscript was auctioned, a portrait of Drinkwater by Rothemann went for 20 guineas.

WOMEN'S DOUBLES HOLDERS ARE DEFEATED

Four Nations In Men's Doubles Semi-Finals BUDGE IN HIS SECOND FINAL

WIMBLEDON hustled to-day, and in a series of important matches decided (a) the women's singles finalists, (b) the men's doubles semi-finalists (c) filled one position in the final bracket of the mixed doubles and polished off the rest of the quarter-final matches in this event, (d) three of the four positions in the semi-finals of the women's doubles were filled.

Most important ties of the day, of course, were the women's singles semi-finals. They saw Miss Jedzejowska of Poland reach the ultimate stage for the first time in her career, and Miss Dorothy Round of Britain sustain her "comeback" by eliminating Mme. Mathieu of France.

Semi-finalists in the men's doubles are Donald Budge and Gene Mako (U.S.), G. von Cramm and H. Henkel (Germany), R. Menzel and L. Heek (Czechoslovakia) and G. P. Hughes and C. R. D. Tuckey (Britain). The Americans and the Germans meet in the next round, while the Czechs and Englishmen will contest the other bracket.

London, July 1. For the second successive day the weather was rather unpleasant at Wimbledon, the sky being overcast and a wind blowing down the courts in gusts. Conditions were anything but ideal.

Miss Alice Marble (U.S.) and Miss Jedzejowska (Poland) met in the first of the women's singles semi-finals on the Centre Court. The Polish girl won 6-0, 6-2, and thoroughly deserved her success. Her heavily cut backhand shots forced Miss Marble into errors.

The American had a set point at 5-3, but Miss Jedzejowska, returning everything, prevented Miss Marble's famous dashes to the net. The Polish girl led 6-5 and had four set points before winning the set in the fourteenth game.

Miss Dorothy Round proved too good for Mme. Mathieu beating her 6-4, 6-0.

Miss Round's placing and volleying was better than that of her opponent, though the match was largely a baseline duel. The Frenchwoman led 3-2 in the first set, but Miss Round recovered to force ahead at 4-3. In the second set Miss Round was brilliant and left Mme. Mathieu struggling.

JAPANESE OUTPLAYED

There were some wonderful matches in the men's doubles. Meeting in the quarter-final G. P. Hughes and C. R. D. Tuckey (Britain) beat Jiro Yamagishi and Nakano (Japan) in straight sets of 6-2, 6-2, 6-2.

The Japanese played too far apart, allowing the British pair to hit be-

Budge and Mako, the American pair had a close encounter with Clifford Sproule and John Bromwich of Australia, finally winning in the fourth set.

There was a very real sensation in the women's doubles, when the holders, Miss K. Stammers and Miss Freda James, lost to Mrs. Pittman and Mrs. R. L. King in straight sets of 6-1, 7-5.

Mrs. D. B. Andrus and Miss Henrotin followed up their sparkling display against Miss Jacobs and Mrs. Sperry by beating Miss McOstrich and Miss Jean Saunders in straight sets. The Franco-American couple meet Mrs. Pittman and Mrs. King in the next round.

Another upset in this event was the elimination of Miss Round and Miss Mary Heeley by Miss Dearman and Miss Joan Ingram. It was a close match, the scores being 9-7, 7-5.

Gene Mako and Miss Jedzejowska played two mixed doubles ties. In the quarter-finals they defeated R. K. Tinkler and Miss Margot Lumb of Britain and later met D. Budge and Miss A. Marble in the semi-final and lost in two sets.

In another quarter-final encounter, Yamagishi and Miss Betty Nuttall were rather unexpectedly beaten by Dr. Daniel Frenn and Miss Dearman.

Playing in the third round of the All-England Plate, in which only those who were beaten in the first and second rounds of the Wimbledon men's and women's singles are eligible to compete, J. Petra of France today defeated W. C. Choy of China by 6-0, 11-9. —Reuter.

'Ghost' Of Bobby Jones Plays Irons On Her Toes

Turnberry (Ayrshire), June 10. America and Australia had a great match in the British Women's Open golf championship here this morning.

While the rest of the world followed the Pam Barton-Mrs. Holm fight, I was the solitary spectator of the match between Miss Peggy Nankivell, green-jumpered, tweed-skirted player from Melbourne, and Miss Barbara Thompson, "on the loose" representative of the "Wimble" reporter.

I thought the better player lost. Metaphorically, Miss Thompson, within sight of the fourth round, held out her hands to Miss Nankivell and said, "I don't want to win, you go instead."

And go Miss Nankivell did. Still, Miss Thompson had something to teach me. It was how to play a full iron shot.

Oddly, as I watched her (she was wearing dark glasses, a pink blouse, and a powder-blue skirt), I thought I saw the ghost of Bobby Jones. It is the way she gets on, to her toes, especially as she hits her iron shot.

As she addresses the ball she doesn't wobble, but three times, in quick succession, puts the club down on the ground behind it.

You may say "Just habit." I don't believe it. It seems to me that while the club back, she is gradually shifting the weight of her body to the left leg so that she will hit against a firm left side.

So far, the arms are loose, hanging naturally from the side; then, a split second before she begins to take the club back, she seems to stretch them out, tighten them.

Now she is swinging the left arm straight as a rolling pin. Now she is coming down, and (watch this carefully) at the moment of impact she is right on her toes, just like a ballet dancer.

The movement is quite palpable. It enables her to get all the weight of her body into the shot, and, believe me, she does.

Miss Dorothy Round, finalist in the women's singles at Wimbledon for the second time.

DOROTHY ROUND IS BEATEN BY NO. 3

(By Ulysses Rogers)

Beckenham, June 10. Miss Dorothy Round, Great Britain's No. 1, after fighting over two hours for her tennis life, was defeated this afternoon by the persistent Mrs. M. R. King (rank No. 3) in the third round of the Kent championships. It took Mrs. King three terrific sets of hard driving before she put out her famous opponent with a score 9-7, 2-6, 12-10.

Mrs. King is short in stature and intensely active. Since the time she came into prominence as Miss Phyllis Mudford, she has probably run more miles on tennis courts than any living woman. Not even excepting the long-limbed Miss Sperry.

Wherever she goes, back and forth, up and down, Mrs. King carries a charming smile with her that makes her a popular favourite, win or lose.

Her game is not particularly varied. She takes the ball mostly shoulder high and swings it on its way with round arm sweeps, putting all the force of her petite body into the blows.

How she kept up this terrible running and smiling at highest pressure this afternoon for forty-six games is a wonder in itself.

Miss Round looked as though the match was in her hands when she led at the start 5-3. The doctor mined little woman with a smile and only pulled her back from this lead but overhauled her and notched the first set at 9-7.

Honours were easy when the Dudley idol, with superior accuracy and beautiful backhand drives, took the second set at 6-2. Then the really great fight began.

Mrs. King ran and swiped her way ahead to 4-2. Miss Round loved it.

It was level pegging again, 9-9. At length, from 40-love in that final game, Mrs. King, with three more match points, ran out.

Just before, Miss Mary Hardwick went down Miss Alice Marble, the American champion, 6-1, 3-6, 6-4.

HIT SIXES OVER THE PAVILION

At Bradford: Yorkshire won by 287 runs.

London, June 10. Cricket at Bradford yesterday was more than bright. It was dazzling.

This is what happened before lunch. Yorkshire, two hours batting, scored the Kent bowlers for 254 runs. Arthur Mitchell hit magnificently. In the first half-hour scored 78. Got four 6's; nine 4's. A ball from Woolley landed on the top of the football-land.

TO-DAY'S CLASSIC AT WIMBLEDON

VON CRAMM OR BUDGE AS NEW CHAMPION?

(By "Veritas")

THERE are two or three interesting features about the final of the men's singles tennis championship which will be played on the Centre Court at Wimbledon this afternoon. For the first time for four years neither of the contestants are Englishmen: Baron Gottfried von Cramm will be figuring in his third successive final: it will be Donald Budge's first.

What is the likely outcome of today's classic match? Or, perhaps I should be on very much safer ground if I said, what is the possible outcome? For these two perfect specimens of tennis craft are so well matched that nobody could expect to get better than even on the match.

Records do not help a great deal. These are not doyens of the international tennis court, who, like Perry and Crawford, for example, have met anything up to a dozen times in various championships and tournaments. Actually they have met twice at Wimbledon—once in the championships, and once in the Davis Cup. Both matches were played in 1935 and they won one apiece.

"EMBODIMENT OF ALL THE VIRTUES"

Meeting in the 1935 Wimbledon semi-final, von Cramm beat the young American, then making his first appearance in England after a match which H. S. Scrivener, famous English tennis critic, described as "the embodiment of all the virtues of baseline play, lustrous hitting, clever placing whether in attack or defence, and almost impeccable accuracy in the return." The scores in von Cramm's favour in that historic match were 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2. And Mr. Scrivener said he attributed the German's victory to the fact that he was a shade more steadfast.

However, if only to disprove that von Cramm had any sort of distinct edge over him, Budge proceeded to beat the German ace three weeks later in the European Zone final of the Davis Cup, winning in brilliant fashion by 6-4, 6-7, 6-6, 6-3. It was Budge's performance in this tie which placed him in the forefront of international tennis players, and convinced the critics that a new world's champion was on the horizon. Today will prove whether Budge will fulfil that prophecy.

If anything I would say that Budge has a slight margin in his favour to-day if only because history has shown that during the last two years he has improved enormously, whereas it is doubtful whether his keenest admirers could claim that von Cramm has done more than remain as good as he was in 1935 and 1936. Furthermore Budge's highly improved progress through five rounds at Wimbledon during the past week and a half has indicated that he is now at the peak of his form. To win through to Wimbledon final with the loss of but a single set is sufficient to justify the warmest confidence in that player's ability to win the title.

Baron von Cramm has had at least one narrow escape from defeat. He only just beat Jack Crawford in the quarter-final and his match on Wednesday with Austin was significant inasmuch that the Englishman discovered his opponent to be vulnerable on the backhand.

Nevertheless one would be guilty of losing perspective by placing too much importance on the manner in which finalists at Wimbledon have won their earlier matches. The fact that Budge and von Cramm are 6-4.

WILL NOT BE LAZY.—Joe Louis, who dethroned James Braddock the world's heavyweight champion in a recent fight, will not remain idle, says his promoter.

LOUIS NOT TO BE IDLE CHAMPION SAYS PROMOTER

Chicago, Illinois, June 23.

Joe Louis, new heavyweight champion of the world, told newsmen here to-day there was one reason why he came off the floor to knock the crown off Jimmy Braddock's head. The Detroit negro battler, second dusky champion in the history of heavyweight boxing, said "Max Schmeling taught me to climb into my shell when hit. Braddock dropped me in the first round. Instead of piling in as I did after Schmeling hit me in the second round, I boxed and took my time."

The Brown Bomber, who scored a knockout over Braddock at the White Sox Stadium here last night, said as he looked toward the future "I will fight any man any time they tell me to fight."

Promoter Mike Jacobs renewed his contract with the new champ for five years, guaranteeing Louis four fights each year. Jacobs said he signed a three year contract with Braddock guaranteeing him action.

Braddock, through his cut lips, said "I lost the championship, but I came out fighting and I went down fighting. If I get a couple of tough fights, under my belt I'll lick him yet. I knew after the first round that my two year layoff had done me no good, I was tired. I made a big mistake not using the right up-percut which dropped Joe in the first round."

After Braddock's 60 per cent. share of the new receipts are cut up he will be lucky to have $60,000; which probably exceeds what he cleared since he won the title. Louis, taking 17 1/2 per cent. for himself and his associates, has earned approximately $350,000 in less than three years. Jacobs said the fight grossed $715,420 and that the paid attendance was 41,084.

Public Fleeced On Epsom Downs AUTHORITIES MUST STOP DERBY DAY RAMP

(By John Macadam)

That well-known operation—the telling of the goose that lays the golden egg—is nowhere carried out with such expert precision as on Epsom Downs on Derby Day, and it is the proud duty of this department to call the attention of you, and you, and you to the whole ramp.

Last year we pleaded for the portable tote that would carry fair betting to the people on the Hill opposite the stands. We pointed out the merciless price-cutting that went on among the innocents who were cut off from the official tote and the reputable bookmakers—the authorities did nothing about it—and here it is happening all over again.

My colleague, John Robertson, roving about on the Hill, saw in stance after instance of persons calling themselves bookmakers who were accepting bets for horses that weren't down to run. The holiday crowds, many of them not having been at a race-meeting since last Derby Day and without glasses, didn't know. But Robertson was marking his card with the aid of his glasses, and he did know. He saved a few humble backers from throwing their shillings and half-crowns away, but he didn't endeavor himself to the boys on the soap-boxes.

ACTUAL INSTANCES

Here are actual instances from Wednesday. Bleu de Roi was quoted generally on the records at 7-1. It was returned at 33-1. That was in the first race. In the second, Hay Fever could be backed at from 6-1 to 10-1 outside. Official starting price was 20-1. Look at these prices:

Horse	Downs price	Official price
Midday Sun	8-1	100-7
Scarlet Plume	50-1	100-7
Renardo	16-1	20-1
Gainsborough Lass	10-1	100-7
Cash Book	6-1	7-1
Perforax	6-1	7-1
Le Ksar	6-1	9-1
Le Grand Duc	6-1	100-9

So there you are. You can see just how easy it is to make a book under these conditions—take all the money you like at 50-1 and save yourself at 100-1.

The men who are playing this game are not regular accredited bookmakers. They are the fly-by-nights, who get hold of a stand and a name for the day only. But—do they show a profit?

There is only one way to stop them, and that is for the authorities to install the tote out there—without waiting any time. They say it can't be done, but I know plenty of ways.

BIT OF WELSHING

Actually, I am told that there was quite a bit of welshing on the part of the fraternity, and if the authorities don't take the matter up and get the tote installed, the reputable bookmakers ought to be for the sake of their own good names. After all, these flyers get the whole profession in wrong, and there ought to be some way of keeping them out.

So the shyest woman in the history of the turf has pulled out the game's biggest plum. When I was casting around for a Derby angle, the old eye fell on the name of Mrs. G. B. Miller. Who, I asked, was Mrs. G. B. Miller? Nobody seemed to know off-hand, and the only thing to do was to ring her up and ask her herself.

Mrs. Miller was as loquacious as a

County Cricket YORKSHIRE WINS BY AN INNINGS Hutton Hits Century

London, July 1. Yorkshire's bid to recapture the county cricket championship continued to-day when the Tykes beat Essex by an innings and 208 runs. Lealoe, Hutton atoned for his failure in the Test match by scoring another century, his 124 being made out of a total of 440. Essex never shaped like scoring runs. In their first 162 and follow-up were sent back for 10 and were dismissed for a mere 80 runs. —Reuter.

BASKETBALL STARS Filipino Players Passing Through Hongkong

On their way to Shanghai for a series of matches, a team of Filipino all-star basketball players will arrive in Hongkong this morning by the s.s. President McKinley. Most of the players were members of the Philippines team that took part in the World Olympic Games at Berlin last year. They are therefore one of the strongest aggregation of players in the country. Local enthusiasts will be given a treat this evening when the visitors engage the Chinese Y.M.C.A. in a match at Bridges Street, commencing at 7 p.m. Only one game will be played as the team will leave for the North at midnight. However, it is possible that more matches will be arranged when the visitors pass through again on their way home.

tween them. Yamagishi was the better of the losers, finely retrieving smashes, and himself smashing well. Nakano occasionally volleyed strongly, but he was weak overhead.

The Japanese made the mistake of feeding the winners with short shots which were easily killed.

England's second string men's doubles were eliminated when F. H. D. Wilde and C. E. Here were beaten by G. von Cramm and H. Henkel (Germany) after four strenuously contested sets.

Alice Marble, 6-1, Was Best Bet For Wimbledon On June 10

Donald Budge is an even chance for Wimbledon, according to the bookmakers. Good as the young Californian is, I should doubt whether there are any takers at this price in a field of 128, writes Gordon Wesley.

G. Von Cramm, the German ace, in view of his recent indisposition and his many defeats this year, seems to be too highly placed as second favourite. The best bets in my view are H. Henkel at 7-1, J. Crawford at 10-1, and a good outside chance is Kio Sin Kie, the Chinese Davis Cup player, at 25-1.

Mme. Sperling is favourite for the women's singles at 2-1, but so great has been the improvement of Miss Alice Marble's play at St. George's Hill Club, Weybridge, tournament, which concluded yesterday, that I consider she is the best bet at 6-1.

To-day's Classic At Wimbledon

Analysts prove only that they are evenly matched.

ANOTHER "BETE NOIR"?
Comparing the two I think there is no question but that von Cramm is the more stylish and "corcoran" player. His artistry is superb, and he can play better than even Austin. What is more von Cramm will invariably score over Austin because he can play a severe type of game without losing his masterful accuracy and beauty of stroke.

But to-day von Cramm will be against a player much more of the Perry type than any other of the German's contemporaries. We all know that Perry has been the German's bete noir and many are prepared to believe that now Budge has strengthened his game in all departments and learnt to take an earlier ball, he will become Perry's successor as "bogy" to von Cramm's Wimbledon aspirations.

Budge offers an unusual problem to any player because he is one of those few people who can boast a stronger backhand than forehand. In 1935 and last year this reacted against him, because then his forehand was relatively weak, and opponents might be expected to attack it. But now the backhand is a tribute to the genius of Perry that he concentrated on Budge's strong point—the backhand—eventually wearing it down so that the American's chief means of attack was reduced to comparative impotency.

It is interesting to speculate from this distance whether von Cramm to-day will be bold enough, and capable enough, to adopt similar tactics.

Even if he decides not to, he will be confronted with the disconcerting knowledge that Budge has now improved on the forehand wing so much that it is almost on a par with his backhand. Budge, in fact, is now a fully equipped player. He has eliminated former weaknesses, such as a running forehand drive, and a speculative overhead. In short he is ready to take over the mantle that was Fred Perry's.

ONE BIG ADVANTAGE
One big factor which must tell in favour of von Cramm is his previous experience of the Centre Court in a championship final. This is his third successive appearance, and it is fair to believe that he benefited to some extent from his matches with Perry even though in the first he was outclassed and in the second he was injured. Despite this he should possess a psychological advantage, and he is a man who will readily make use of that advantage.

NEWPORT COUNTY SIGN DERBY FULL BACK

London, June 10.
Football transfer market was again active yesterday. Jack Webb, reserve Derby full-back, ends a long association with the club by signing for Newport County.

Webb, who at present is manager to the Derbyshire cricket club, went to Derby from a Wearside League team in 1927, but made only twenty-five League appearances for Derby. He was placed on the open to transfer list at the end of last season.

Doncaster Rovers were also busy, completed transfer negotiations for A. R. Allen, Fulham outside left, who has been at Craven Cottage for three seasons.

He formerly played for Clapton Orient as an amateur, was an English schoolboy international. Fee is said to be £350.

Ted Davis resigned from the managership of Bath City on being appointed manager of Coleheath Town, the new Southern League club. He has been manager of Bath for ten years, transferred Boulton to Arsenal.

Alan Todd, goalkeeper, leaves Port Vale, joins Nottm. Forest, and as part of the deal Masters, inside Forest forward or winger, goes to Port Vale.

Aberdeen defeated Orange Free State 2-0 at Bloemfontein yesterday, states Reuter. They have won five of the six games played.

If Budge plays better to-day than a year ago, he will win; if he doesn't, I shall expect to see von Cramm figure as the new amateur champion of the world.

In common with most of my readers, I am sure, I would give a lot to be on the Centre Court this afternoon, for the odds are on von Cramm and Budge will serve up the most classic Wimbledon final since Jack Crawford beat Ellsworth Vines in 1933.

Two Cases Of "Resurrection"

"Dead" Come To Life Again

Two cases of "resurrection" in Chinese villages have been reported near Shanghai since the beginning of the week, the country folk being almost frightened to death upon seeing the "dead" come to life again.

The first report was that of a farmer named Shan Hsiang-sen, who died in the Tsooching district within the jurisdiction of Greater Shanghai, at about 4 o'clock on Monday afternoon. Early next morning while the relatives and friends were preparing for his funeral, he suddenly arose, causing a terrific pandemonium among them.

Investigation revealed that the man had been suffering from paralysis for some time and on Monday his heart stopped beating. Next morning, however, he suddenly revived and after a few minutes could talk. He is still lying in a weak condition.

Late on Tuesday evening another resurrection story was reported by the Chinese press. A dispatch from Soochow stated that a farmer's wife who died in her home in the Hsiang Cheng Village on Sunday, also returned to life after her family wept for her. When the woman showed signs of life the frightened relatives fled. When they returned the woman was again showing no signs of life. Just then the coffin arrived and the body of the woman was placed in it. The cover was not put on the coffin, to allow the relatives to have a last glimpse of the woman. Early on Monday morning the woman again showed signs of life and was taken out of the coffin. Now she is reported to be talking and eating once again.

The coffin, which had been bought on credit, will be returned to the undertakers, states the vernacular press.

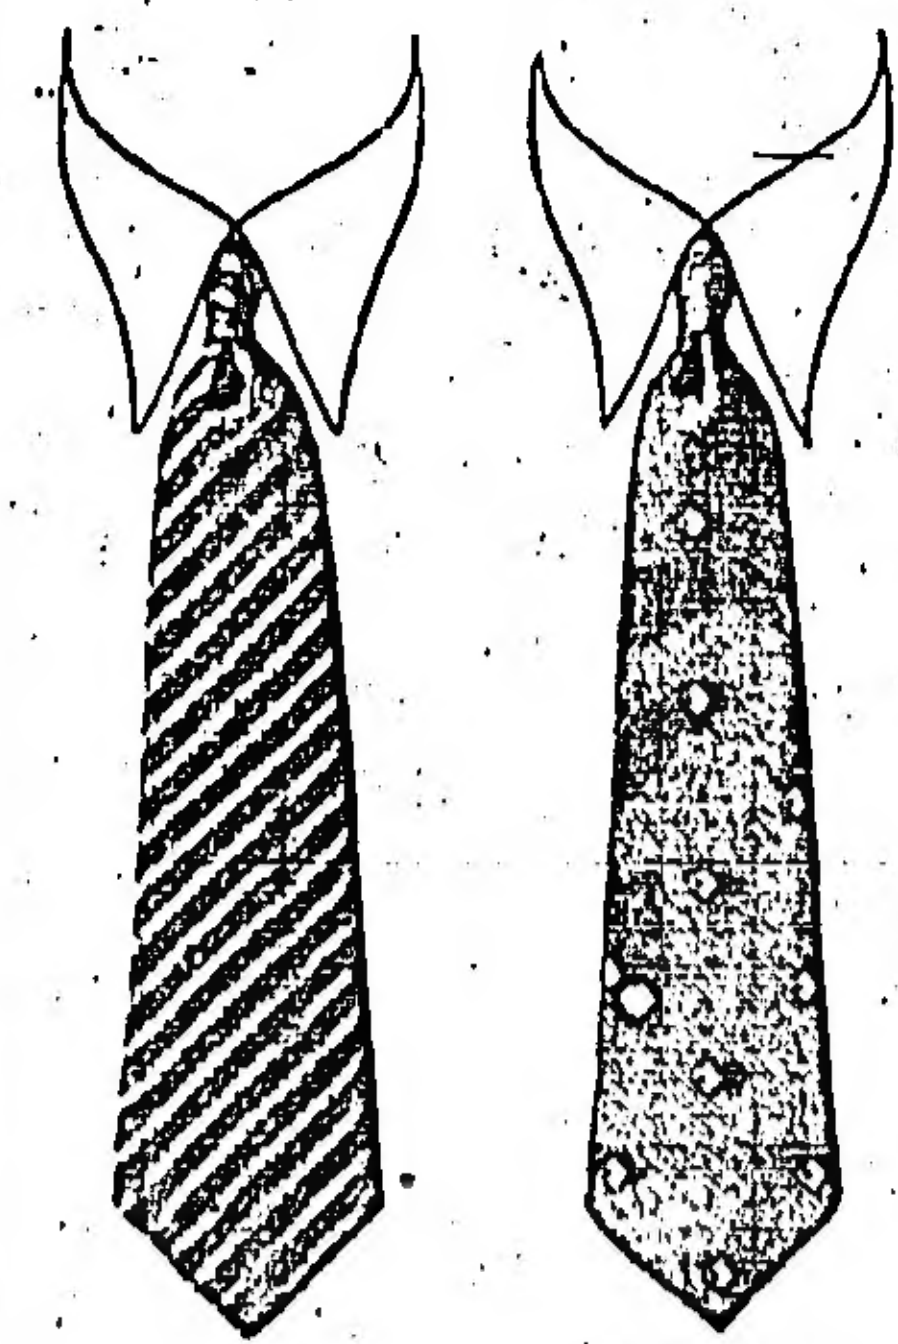

IRISH ELECTIONS

NATION VOTES FOR NEW DAIL AND CONSTITUTION

Dublin, July 1.
The Irish Free State is polling to-day not only to elect a new government but to give a verdict on the new Constitution.

There are 274 candidates, including five women, and the polling booths will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Prevailing opinion is that Mr. de Valera will be returned to power. Should this occur it will follow almost automatically that the draft Constitution will be accepted.

Counting of the votes starts to-morrow. First preference counts are likely to be known in the evening and final results next Wednesday or Thursday.—Reuter Bulletin.

ment, and has assumed supervision himself.

General Wu referred the matter for solution to the Nanking authorities, who, in turn, requested Mr. T. V. Soong to solve the issue. Mr. Soong's visit afforded him an opportunity to inspect the industries and to devise a practical method by which all parties would be satisfied. After due consideration and having formed a financial syndicate under the banking members' control to take over the factories, it now evolves itself into a three-party conflict, and no other personality than Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek can settle the matter. Competent observers in Canton consider it best to turn the industries over to suitable parties free from political influence.

In some quarters it is felt that Governor Wu has a very difficult role to play. The province of Kwangtung has always been noted for Cantonese aggressiveness. To force issues therefore, might result in nothing being accomplished.

AGRICULTURAL SCHEME

At a meeting of Chinese bankers here Governor Wu outlined a scheme by which he proposed a three-year plan for agricultural reconstruction. The plan calls for $30,000,000 to be spent each year. One section deals with rice production and calls for an expenditure of $30,000,000 over a period of three years to enable production of 10,000,000 piculs of rice. Areas now under water, or land now considered waste, due to lack of irrigation, are to be treated by remedies such as competent engineers will prescribe. The delta section near the mouth of the Pearl River will be dammed and the water used to irrigate nearby areas.

It is estimated that $20,000,000 each year will be needed to carry out the building of roads and bridges, reforesting areas in the country and assisting the farmers to increase production.

A three-year programme will utilise $90,000,000 of which $30,000,000 will be used for rice production and $60,000,000 for general agricultural reconstruction.

Chinese bankers have been requested to formulate a definite scheme of finance by the time the Chairman of the Province returns to Canton from Nanking. The amount for reconstruction is considerable and financiers are confronted with difficulties of finding securities that could warrant a loan. It appears that the bankers have been asked to co-operate in the form of a committee with the Governor and to find ways to raise the money and its security. Perhaps Governor Wu will petition Nanking to not as security for an Agricultural Reconstruction Bond issue.

Independent financiers consider the scheme sympathetically but cannot find suitable forms of security which could be offered to permit finalisation of a loan to carry out the work.

WHAMPOA PORT

Mayor Tseng Yang-fu, concurrently acting Finance Commissioner, with the Whampoa port development scheme, inner harbour project, trolleybus and waterworks contracts, new stadium, Canton-Mehshein railway, steelworks and several other projects, has his hands more than full, despite the fact that he claims to have all the funds to carry out the various works under his care.

The Whampoa Port scheme, which requires a further $10,000,000 apart from the U.S.$2,000,000 already raised, has, according to well-informed quarters, not yet been settled. The inner harbour project, which has been presented to Chinese bankers on two occasions, is now under revision, but so far bankers have not committed themselves to participate in the $4,000,000 which is required to carry out the work. The work includes $1,800,000 for a bridge to Honam and $2,200,000 to construct roads, godowns, wharves and cranes.

The work on the waterworks scheme appears to be subject to considerable revision.

CURRENCY REFORM

Mr. T. V. Soong's visit here resulted in the rate of 1:44 for the National dollar in terms of local currency. He also sought to abolish the Hongkong note from circulation in

PROMOTED TO ADMIRAL'S RANK

His Excellency Admiral Sir Charles Little, who has been promoted to the rank of full Admiral and been re-appointed Commander-in-Chief of the China Station.

Kwangtung and made an order accordingly. The rate of 1:44 is called by some well-known authorities as the compromise rate. It was the pressure of repeated requests for revision by the military authorities here that made the Central Government despatch Mr. Soong to Canton.

The rate was petitioned to be reduced at 1:30 as officers claimed that they had to support their families, a large number of whom were in provinces where the national dollar was being circulated. As their pay was in local currency, to remit funds would mean a heavy loss.

Mr. Soong's visit to Canton this time did not leave him much time to formulate a definite programme of reconstructional activities, but on one or two occasions he utilised his contact with financiers to induce investment of Chinese funds in Kwangtung. Every indication of a favourable reception to his request is evident, but it seems questionable whether any feasible proposals have been put forward.

BRITISH INTEREST

A very strong and influential group of British financiers has been in negotiation with the local authorities for some time, and it is understood

Sir John added that he understood that a similar message was being sent to the French Minister of Finance by the Secretary of the United States Treasury.—British Wireless.

Threatened Roosevelt

Elderly Man Held In Boston

Boston, July 1.
An elderly man named Morton D. Wainwright has been arrested here by Secret Service agents, on a charge of writing letters to President F. D. Roosevelt, threatening the life of the chief executive.

The local Secret Service Bureau says it is also anxious to trace threatening notes written to Miss Ethel Du Pont, the bride of Mr. Franklin Roosevelt, Jr. She was married to the President's son yesterday, three companies of regular army troops guarding the Du Pont estate where the ceremony and reception took place.—Reuter.

that the Central authorities are also carrying out certain negotiations with this group.

The proposal is a very comprehensive one and in time will contribute to the reconstruction of the province. Competent financial authorities are in complete agreement with the scheme and high officials have given every support.

A proposal of this type should be well received in Chinese and British circles where a Sino-British rapprochement has been sought for some time.—An Occasional Correspondent.

DUNLOP FORT '90'

The new tyre meets the conditions produced by increased car efficiency.

At the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, Li Fuk-chong, chief magistrate, presided over the preliminary proceedings. Mr. Sze, former managing director of the factory, the Shing-shing Enterprises Manufacturing, again appeared on remand, charged with being an accessory before the fact in the murder of Mr. Chan Lai-tsun, alias David Chan Sze, former managing director of the factory. Mr. Sze's defence lawyer, Mr. Leo D'Almeida, Senr., for the defence asked for a date to be fixed. The police, however, stated that this could not yet be done. Mr. D'Almeida said he would ask for a date at the next hearing. The case was adjourned for a week.

Later in the morning, Au Hing, the last of four men arrested in connection with the crime, was charged with the actual murder. He appeared in the dock with a detective in attendance. A week's remand was ordered.

BANANAS on the Family Menu

WHO do you envy most to-day? The sun-bather in Tahiti or the winner of a lottery ticket?

I dream of the small boy who looks at the blue sky and shining sun, and says: "No school to-day," and goes off fishing for tiddlers in the nearest pond.

But, really, we housewives spend far too much time, when the weather is good, preparing and cooking meals.

For Nature has so many ready-to-eat foods for us in summer time, with every vitamin and calory in them that the most exacting doctor could order.

Germ Proof Case

THINK of bananas, for instance. Here they come literally by the million, each one grown in a germ proof cover, from Jamaica.

In that land of sunshine they are the staple diet, and why shouldn't they be here? For never was there so much goodness and enjoyment packed into a single fruit!

The value of its tough outer skin cannot be over-estimated, for in summer time foods are easily contaminated, and quite often some form of food poisoning breaks out and germs are carried by flies and dust.

But there is no danger of the banana being contaminated, for he is as safe as an egg inside his skin. Now the big thing about bananas is the large amount of glucose they contain. For glucose is quickly assimilated, and is converted into energy.

Full of Vitamins

AND the amount of energy that gets used up during the summer months workers, as well as holiday-makers, know.

Bananas are specially good for children, as the glucose is a preventive of that tiresome digestive complaint acidosis, which accounts for the peevishness, irritability and sickness of so many children.

Apart from glucose, bananas contain plenty of Vitamin C, as well as the growth-forming Vitamins A and B, which are so essential to good health and well being. Fortunately, everybody likes bananas. There has to be no tempting or disguising. "Bananas neat" is the holiday-maker's maxim, and it's a hard one to beat.

Not that bananas aren't good mixers. Try one fried with the bacon in the morning, or mashed up with a little milk and a poached egg on top.

Complete Meal

THERE are dozens of ways a housewife can knock up a meal with a few bananas as the base in a short time.

I need not tell you what good

The glucose in a banana supplies the energy which summer days consume. For a real meal try a banana in a wholewheat sandwich.

sandwiches they make. A slice of well-buttered Allinson bread that's made from the finest British wheat, a spread of mashed banana (a good thick spread, too), and there's a meal for you, with more energy and goodness in it than a hefty beef steak.

A wholewheat sandwich with a banana filling is the ideal supper for a child as well as a stand-by meal for a healthy hiker.

As for fruit salads, it is surprising how the bulk and nourishment are increased by the addition of some finely sliced bananas.

You may question that last remark about an ideal supper for a child, and repeat an old wives' tale that they are not digestible. Believe me, it is an "old tale."

By Mrs. Bardell

Maybe it was true in days gone by when the cultivation of bananas was left to chance and their transport and storing in the elementary stage.

Honey Ripe

BUT now, the care and science, and providing a banana is ripe a one-year-old can easily digest it.

You know when it is ripe, of course. Being yellow is not sufficient. There must be a little browning at the end and a general freckling of the skin. A banana at its best is honey ripe and the flavour is more mellow and generally delicious.

With this lovely Nature's food at hand, aren't we silly to bother about so much cooking?

Make up your mind to have a weekly banana order, just as you do the bread and the milk.

Restored Energy

HAVE a special banana corner in the larder. And when you are tired yourself in the middle of the morning, with the household chores, five minutes' rest and a golden ripe banana pulled from the bunch will soon replace the energy you have expended during the past few hours.

The children won't have to be tempted to eat bananas. They like them far too well, and if sometimes the bunch gets reduced in size rather more quickly than you expected by young visitors between meals, it doesn't matter.

You know they couldn't have better food, no matter if it is eaten under a haystack instead of at a meal table.

Experiment
a bit
with it

You've only to change your style of hairdressing or make-up and you change your personality. You look different—feel different. Perhaps you're like this girl with a long, thin face. You can, if you wish—

ARE YOU TIRED OF YOUR FACE?

—accentuate this characteristic by brushing your hair upwards from the sides of the forehead into high curls, and then letting a light fringe of curls fall across the middle of the forehead.

For make-up, place your rouge high, starting from the temples, and pluck your eyebrows lightly at the extremities. As a second experiment try——parting your hair in the middle, and drawing it up high from the sides of the face into big curls. This will give your face a more distinguished outline. You can modify the length of the face by placing the rouge well in the middle of the cheekbones. Try with this lightly-curved eyebrows, slightly thicker in the middle than at the extremities.

Diseases of the Nails

I GET many inquiries as to the cause and treatment of different diseases of the nails.

The commonest appears to be an inflammation of the structure round the nail, which is generally known as a whitlow. When the inflammation is by quite superficial and very little damage is done.

but if the infection involves the bed of the nail pus forms and the nail drops off in time.

The cause of the trouble is generally due to a germ which enters the skin through some tear or foreign body in it.

Again, if there is any other infection of the hands or skin, or if the person is in a run-down condition or tubercular, whitlow frequently occurs.

SOAKING in hot water containing some small amount of antiseptic, such as Dettol or Lysol, will help to draw out the inflammation. This should be carried out every four hours. If the nail is badly affected it will have to be removed and warm fomentations applied. The general health should be attended to and a good iron tonic taken.

La Meri In Colony

Noted Dancer To Appear At King's

La Meri, famous dancer who is to appear at the King's Theatre on Monday next for a single performance, arrived here this morning on the President McKinley from Manila.

Quiet voiced and capable, the dancer lacks the obviously temperamental air so common in most artists, nor has she the exotic, painted appearance of most of her profession, despite the fact that her charm of manner and appearance is obvious.

Starting in February, 1936, at the Savoy, London, where she gave 14 performances, the dancer has since made a tour of Australia, where she gave 130 performances, India, the Malay Peninsula and Manila.

India was included in the itinerary, said the dancer this morning, mainly for the sake of seeing the native customs of the people, in order that she could more completely understand their dances. In every country the dancer visits she picks up new dances, together with the exact costumes, customs and beliefs of the natives. Her theatre repertoire includes about 100 dances.

The most beautiful dance observed during the present tour was the Bodo in Malay, described by La Meri as the "most purely feminine dance I have ever witnessed—feminine in its best and most beautiful sense." The dance, however, is not as wide in its scope as many other native dances of India and other countries, and is particularly difficult, since the hands and feet move independently of one another, often one of them quickly and one slowly.

La Meri's performance here will include four Spanish dances, four interpretative dances and six racial dances. The racial dances are only given when La Meri has thoroughly mastered the exact technique of the natives, obtained the exact costume and is sure that every movement is absolutely accurate.

The native dances which La Meri will perform here will include Lullana, a dance of the orthodox of Bhurata Naya; Krishna and Radha, another Indian dance; the hoop dance, one of the many ceremonial dances of the American "Redskins," and an Hawaiian dance, a modern version of the Hula.

"Askari."—There is no hope of the licensed system being restored.

Endeavour II Selected As Challenger

New York, July 1. Mr. T. O. M. Sopwith, the British sportsman, announced today that his yacht, Endeavour II, would be the challenger for the America's Cup.

Mr. Sopwith brought two beautiful yachts to the United States this year, the newly constructed racing craft, Endeavour II, and the original challenger, Endeavour I. There is little to choose between them, but the new boat appears to be seconds faster in the mile.—Reuter.

Recent Swatow Incident

Japanese Residents Impatient

New developments in the Swatow case occurred when the matter was again referred to Canton yesterday for final settlement owing to the failure to settle the matter on the spot, says the Canton Daily Sun.

The affair is complicated by the fact that Japanese residents in Swatow, impatient over the slow developments, have sent a representative to Tokyo to urge speedy action. On the assumption that the consular policeman Kiyoshi Aoyama, was man-handled by Chinese police, five demands have been presented to the Swatow Municipal Government.

Holding that the facts of the case do not show that the Chinese were in the wrong, the Swatow authorities insist that Aoyama assaulted Chinese policemen.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

THE CHARACTER OF MEN DEPENDS MORE ON THEIR OCCUPATIONS THAN ON ANY TEACHING WE CAN GIVE THEM OR PRINCIPLES WITH WHICH WE CAN IMBUE THEM.—Ruskin.

An unknown Japanese boy, aged five years, was sent to the Kowloon Hospital yesterday with injuries to his left leg, caused when he was run over by a taxi cab No. 768 in Canton Road near the Yau-mat Market.

The wedding took place at the Registry this morning of Mr. James Dang and Miss Alice Wong. Mr. W. A. Jones, Deputy Registrar of Marriages, officiated, and the witnesses were Messrs. A. A. Rumjahn and Chan Wah-chiu.

A report was made to the police yesterday by Mr. Anderson, of the steamer Ardent, lying in the Cosmo-bolton Docks, that some person entered his cabin during his absence yesterday afternoon, and stole foreign and local currency, and jewelry to the total value of $242.

Chun Shul, 48, unemployed, failed to appear before Mr. K. M. A. Barnett at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning in answer to a charge of keeping a common gaming house at No. 22, Hui-chong Road on June 30. His bail of $50 was estimated. Twelve other men who were charged with gambling were each fined $2.50. The Poor Box benefitted by the sum of $5.50 which was picked off the floor. Detective Sergeant Brooks prosecuted.

Three stokers of the s.s. Nanjing, summoned before Mr. K. M. A. Barnett at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning charged with trespassing failed to make their appearance. Their bail of $5 each was estimated. Defendants were Yuen Siu, 22, Ats, Chun, 39 and Chau Wan-chuen, 35. Acting Inspector Russell stated that defendants wandered into the grounds and started plucking fowls off the trees, saying that they wanted them for medicine.

A coolie, Au Chan, of No. 10 Bulkeley Street, Hui-chong, was admitted to the Kowloon Hospital yesterday with injuries to his right hand. Three of his fingers were cut off as a result of being caught in a wire attached to a driving wheel of a circular saw, at the Sun Wo sawmills.

When You're In Love" (King's Theatre, to-day)—It's hard to praise this film without given the impression of indulging in excessive adulation. But that it is one of the nicest pictures Hongkong has enjoyed for a long while will be generally conceded. Grace Moore is in best form, and sings a much wider variety of numbers than hitherto. If you have already seen the picture, you will probably want to do so again.

"Roberta" (Queen's Theatre, to-day)—Here is really one of the Old Favourites. The writer has always ranked this as the best of the Rogers-Astah pictures, not the least being that they have with them such an ideal supporting cast. Irene Dunne makes a beautiful number of "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes," and as for Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire, they surpass themselves.

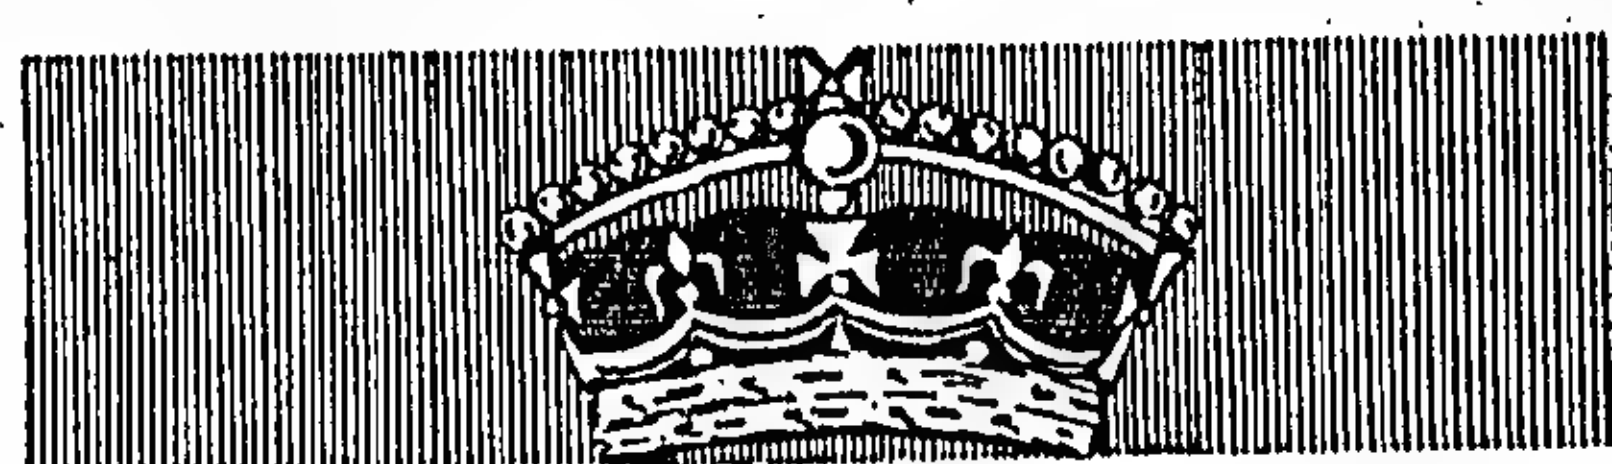

"20 Million Sweethearts" (Majestic Theatre, to-day)—Admirers of Dixie Powell will thoroughly enjoy this offering, which is greatly enhanced by the presence of vivacious Ginger Rogers. A first-rate Warner Bros. musical romance.

When Knights Were Bold" (Star Theatre, to-day)—Excellent vehicle for that Prince Charming of light comedians and expert tap-dancer, Jack Buchanan. Fay Wray is also much happier in this picture and away from the customary blood-curdling roles she has to adopt.

"The First Baby" (Alhambra Theatre, to-day)—Amusing little sketch, which gives half a dozen rising young actors good chances of showing their talents. Film features Johnny Downs, Shirley Deane, Dixie Dunbar, Jane Darwell, Marjorie Gaten and Gene Lockhart.

"Dracula's Daughter" (Oriental Theatre, to-day)—Eerie but exciting sequel to "Dracula," with first-class performances by Gloria Holden, Otto Kruger, and others. The timing is perfect and the suspense, with its dramatic climax thrillingly sustained.

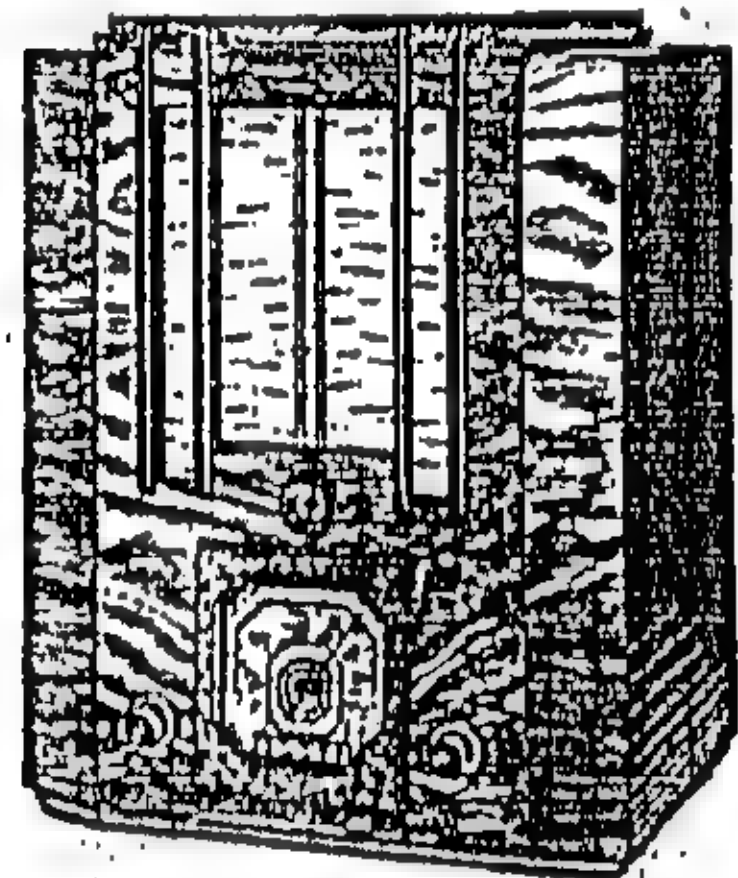

STILL of first importance in choosing a whisky is the question of brewing, age and quality. You need have no qualms about choosing King George IV.

It is one of the finest whiskies in the world to-day.

Boston, July 1. An elderly man named Morton D. Walnwright has been arrested here by Secret Service agents, on a charge of writing letters to President F. D. Roosevelt, threatening the life of the chief executive.

The local Secret Service Bureau says it is also anxious to trace threatening notes written to Miss Ethel Du Pont, the bride of Mr. Franklin Roosevelt, Jr. She was married to the President's son yesterday, three companies of regular army troops guarding the Du Pont estate where the ceremony and reception took place.—Reuter.

Steel Plant Re-Opens

General Settlement Not Yet In Sight

Chicago, Ill., July 1. Thousands of men returned peacefully to work in the Inland Steel plant in East Chicago today. It was the first trouble-free opening of a steel mill since the strike began.

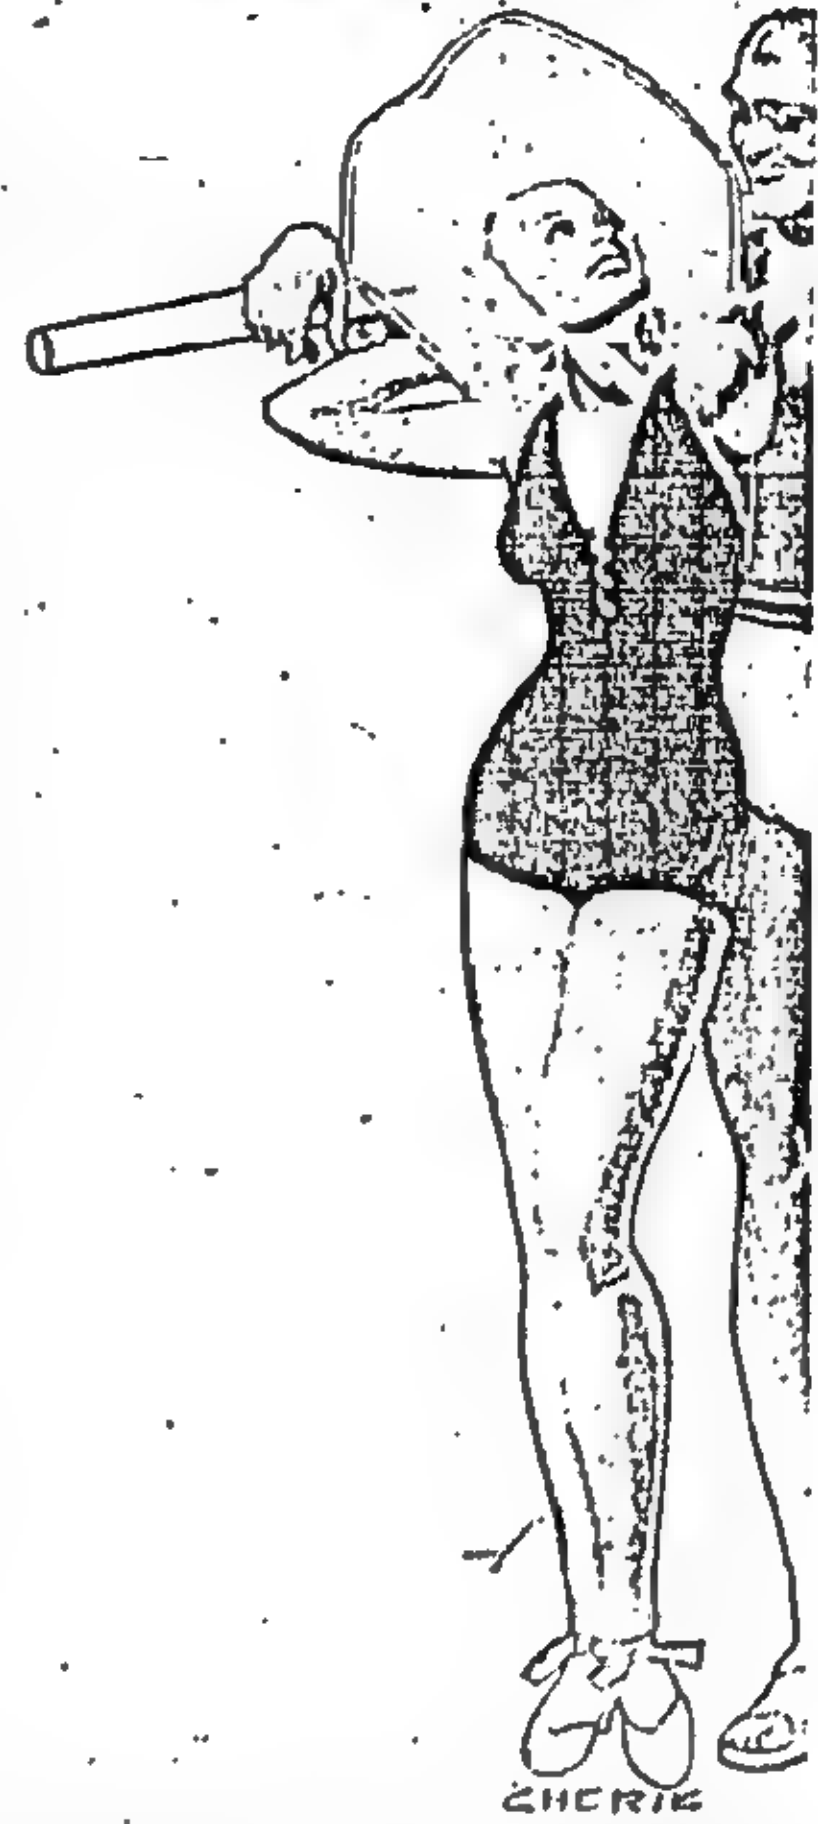

A local agreement made the re-opening possible. The likelihood of a general agreement is diminished by the announcement that the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, President Furnell, is unwilling to make an agreement with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, subsidiary of the C.I.O.—Reuter.

STEEL SETTLEMENT

Chicago, July 1. The settlement between the Inland Steel management and the striking union included all issues except the S.V.O.C. demand for a written contract, which points the Labour Relations Board is considering for judgment in Chicago.

The Youngstown Sheet management has offered opening, but the Republic plant is operating in South Chicago, and Republic, Bethlehem and Youngstown companies are operating in East Chicago.—United Press.

The new-comer to the East is generally beset with advice as to how to keep fit—much of which is often contradictory. But, on one important point all are agreed, the necessity for regularity in the daily habit. Constipation must be avoided, for this is one of the chief causes of ill-health.

Pinkettes, tiny pink laxative pills, are just the thing to keep you regular. Taken when needed, they dispel constipation, tone up the liver, aid digestion, correct biliousness and sick headaches, purify the breath, clear the skin, relieve piles. Chemists everywhere sell this convenient, all-sweet laxative, which acts as gently as nature.

BRITISH COTTON INDUSTRY

Although the British cotton industry has not the hold in Eastern markets which it enjoyed for many long years, the magnificent display in the textile section of the recent British Industries Fair clearly demonstrated that it is still able to hold its own against foreign competitors. The collective exhibit arranged on one stand and offering a choice of more than three hundred different fine cotton dress fabrics was in itself an achievement, and it fully revealed the indomitable spirit of an industry which, despite the most severe and protracted trade depression, has continued to pursue co-operative research on a large scale in order to ensure that the quality of fine British cotton goods shall remain unsurpassed.

The Cotton Research Association possesses one of the largest and best equipped research stations in the country. It is called the Shirley Institute and is established on the outskirts of Manchester, which is the headquarters of Great Britain's cotton industry. The buildings of the station cover an area of over three acres, their cost being well over £200,000. The tendency of all modern industry is towards scientific methods and research, both on the administrative and productive side, and that the cotton industry fully endorses the modern view may be judged by the fact that the staff of the Shirley Institute, which fifteen years ago numbered twenty-five, has now risen to 270. So great are the demands on the services of the research station that new buildings are constantly being added, the latest addition including large weaving sheds for experiments with cotton and rayon, under varying degrees of humidity and heat. Another field in which research is being carried out vigorously aims at ascertaining the effects of light on dyed cotton fabrics, as it has been found that some dyes apparently help to protect the fabric from the influence of strong lights whilst others have the exactly opposite effect. There is evidence in this sphere of research work of a careful study of conditions which might be encountered in overseas markets. Whatever the shortcomings of the industry in the past, the spirit of enterprise and attention to important detail now animating those at its head give great promise for the future. Above all, there is ample assurance of quality in British products, even in the grades in which competition is most severe.

DOWNING STREET PORTRAIT

N. Chamberlain, LIMITED

by Harold Laski

range, he has the historic Chamberlain realization that social problems are urgent. He is an efficient administrator, who rapidly becomes the master of the Department over which he presides.

It is well known that Mr. Baldwin drove his Cabinet on a loose rein under Mr. Chamberlain. I do not think there will be any doubt of where the ultimate control lies.

BUT he has grave defects. He is not an imaginative person. His private life is narrow. He has never been tempted to their examination; it never occurs to him that they may be legitimately doubted. He approaches all his problems from the somewhat commonplace assumptions of the average business man.

He has what William James called "habit without philosophy." He believes in being practical; but his view of what is practical is wholly limited by his own narrow experience. He has little ability to penetrate the minds of other people. He is contemptuous of opposition to his own essentials. He rarely can be persuaded to see any other side of the case but his own.

There is nothing daring or experimental about him. He has the courage of an obstinate man who has made his bargain with destiny; he would never admit that the bargain can be repented. His social outlook was formed thirty years ago, when his father was the uncrowned King of Birmingham, and it has never altered.

There are people who regard Mr. Chamberlain as a reactionary. That is not, I think, quite fair. His purposes are high purposes; he would give his life to make a great empire.

But the forces to which he looks to make the empire great, the forces of which he is himself the expression and the representative, are, in fact, its most reactionary forces.

THEY have none of that magnanimity which Burke declared indispensable to the successful working of empire. They confound the volume of the trade returns with the volume of happiness.

They are either ignorant of how the masses live, or convinced that the masses would be content to live that way if it were not for agitators. They have no vision of what Geneva might mean, or what Soviet Russia does mean.

They think of the new forces afoot in the world exactly as their progenitors thought of the French Revolution. Quite sincerely, they identify their private welfare with the public well-being.

That is how Mr. Chamberlain thinks. That he so thinks with profound sincerity no one who has watched him at work will deny. There is nothing in him of Mr. Baldwin's occasional imaginative insight. There is not an atom of President Roosevelt's daring.

The man who got its municipal bank for Birmingham does not see why any other city should have its municipal bank also; and he is genuinely surprised that his attitude should cause surprise.

The man who cancelled the American debt thinks that "even the Middle West" can understand the grounds of his action; he is amazed that the Middle West should resent his contemptuous reference.

If he had moments of instinctive and imaginative generosity, he might see wider perspectives than those which open to him. But the man who, in making the Ottawa agreement, laid so much of the world's economic well-being as a wreath upon the tomb of his father's memory does not speculate upon foundations.

So that from Mr. Chamberlain we shall get some years of characteristic Tory rule. There will be no occasional sermons in the Baldwin manner. There will be little of the plea for mutual understanding by which Mr. Baldwin sweetened even defeat for his opponents. Mr. Chamberlain is, in the Bismarckian sense, a man who plays real politics.

His class is in power; while he is there he will do all he can to see that it keeps its power. He will not even be anxious, as Mr. Baldwin was anxious, to maintain unlimpaired the special compromises of our political system.

His conception of political democracy does not include the extension of its principles to the economic sphere as well. He has even forgotten the doctrine of ransom—of the rich man's privileges by the social services he helps to pay for in return—which his father preached so stoutly in the 'seventies. Or, rather, perhaps his conception of the limits of ransom is that set by the business community's conception of what it can afford.

HIS attitude to excess profits shows clearly enough that the one thing he would wish to avoid is disturbance of the confidence of business men. For him, they are the essence of the community, as Macaulay thought the middle classes the "natural representatives of the human race."

Mr. Chamberlain, indeed, will be our first middle-class Prime Minister in capitalist democracy's period of economic contraction. Mr. Asquith was a lawyer of Whig views; Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and Mr. Baldwin were reactionaries rather than business men.

With Mr. Chamberlain, the true philosophy of the business man will be at last resident at 10, Downing Street. With his accession to the supreme office, problems will be examined as a business man looks at the balance sheet of a company. There will be honesty, precision, energy. But the times call for imagination, for vision, for experimentalism. I do not see these qualities in Mr. Chamberlain.

That is why I cannot regard his Premiership without apprehension. He is the expression of an outlook at war with all the new hopes that are striving for expression in our day.

SCHOOLBOY RAGGING

By A VICTIM

WHEREVER these of the old school are gathered together, there will be talk of the famous rags that took place in the old days.

The occasions that are recalled are not the ones when the boys simply made a noise or were allowed to do exactly as they liked by some soft-hearted or soft-headed master. To be remembered a rag must have something of artistry in it.

For instance, one master was taking his class in the usual way—rather a noisy way, he it said—when two bearded figures entered, muffled up in hats and coats so that their features were hardly visible. They claimed to be the plumbers, and that they had work to do in that very room.

Not content with this, the two boys carried the rag still further by actually pulling up one of the floorboards over the pipes. They then produced hammers and hanged merrily on the pipes for the rest of the lesson, timing the beat nicely to coincide with the unfortunate master's efforts to instruct the form. It is said that the poor man never found out the truth.

Another master had so little control over his pupils that he could not even make them stay in the room during the whole of his period. He made the following entry in the punishment book, "For getting out of window during lesson."

This man's life was made a burden to him in many ingenious ways. He was a science teacher, a fact which gave the more enterprising boys plenty of scope. "You know, it's a most extraordinary thing," he used to say, "I go up and down between benches, and when I come to the end I find that my gown is in knots behind."

A senior master in a famous public school was once set a problem in fact. He heard a tremendous uproar in one of the class-rooms, and set out to investigate it, thinking the master could not be there.

As he entered the room there was an instant hush. The senior master glanced round to behold his colleague emerge stealthily from behind the blackboard, where he had taken refuge from his class.

Such stories may seem difficult to believe. Most of us remember the power wielded by the master. But the fact is that no punishment will stop a boy from ragging once he has made up his mind that a certain master is a suitable victim.

It is really only personality and not threat of punishment that is the secret of discipline, and anyone could be ragged if all the boys agreed on it.

A concerted effort is the most difficult to stop, such as all the boys tapping on the desk, or all coming into form with Woolworth spectacles on, a feat actually performed.

All Fools

April 1st is naturally a day which presents great opportunities to the boys. An ingenious form of catch is the following:—

A selected boy waits until the master is well settled in his chair and has begun the lesson, and then taps on the under side of the desk, imitating a knock at the door. If the unsuspecting man looks up he sees the words "April Fool" chalked in large letters on one of the inside panels.

One master was so incredibly thoughtless as to leave in his form room long glass tubes and a good supply of plasticene. Their proper use was for a model, but the boys had other ideas, and the bombardment proceeded merrily throughout the next lesson.

Judicious use of a Bunsen burner flame during science periods will provide plenty of amusement. Glass tubing may be made very hot without changing its appearance, and the master is then persuaded to pick it up.

All the ragging is not on the boys' side. A certain schoolmaster, who was a keen cricketer, used to announce punishment with "To-night we're going to have a game. I'm going to bat first, and then rain will stop play!"

Another master's methods were less ferocious and less effective. He used to climb up to the ventilator and say, "Look out, you chaps; the head-master's coming!"

It must not be thought that such things happen to all masters. Only a small minority are favoured with these attentions, and with the new efficiency in schools over that minority is dwindling.

By-gone Marriage Notices

COPIES of the "Scots Magazine" of a hundred to a hundred and fifty years ago will yield much amusing entertainment to anyone who cares to look through them for wedding notices. These bygone marriage notices were much more interesting than their modern counterparts, mainly owing to the particulars of the parties that were given.

Disparity between the ages of the bride and bridegroom is not unknown nowadays, but surely the difference of eighty years mentioned in the following notice must constitute a record:—

"Robert Judge Esq., of Cooksborough, Ireland, aged 85, to Miss Ann Nugent, aged 15. He served in King William's wars, and received a ball in his nose."

The height of the wedded couple was frequently given, accompanied by other interesting details, such as their age, fortune, and even the length of courtship. The "tall and short of it" marriage is well represented in the following:—

"December (1775.) At York, Mr. Thomas, a grenadier in the Yorkshire militia, 6 feet 2 inches high, to Miss Hannah Tennick of Clearham, 3 feet 2 inches high, with a fortune of £5,000."

A marriage notice of 1779, relating to a couple aged 80 and 85, concludes thus:—

"And what is still more remarkable, there has been a courtship carried on betwixt them for more than sixty years."

Then there was the much-married man, who was quite unable to recollect a deceased wife's name:—

November 3 (1775.) At Dullwich, David Wilson, journeyman gardener, to Catherine Crawl, aged 40, his fifth wife. He is 71 years of age. His first wife was a Dutchwoman, whose name he has forgot; the others were Scotswomen."

Novellists in need of material to make a really entertaining story may be interested in the two following notices:—

"July 26 (1775.) John Kerder, a labourer and married man, was imprisoned as a soldier in the year 1741; he became a French prisoner, but made his escape, and settled in Germany, where he married and buried two wives. After thirty-three years' absence, he came to England, and found his first wife by mere accident last week, selling fruit in Oxford Road. She had buried two husbands in the time; and being both disengaged they willingly renewed their former connection."

"February (1785.) At Newcastle, Mr. Silvertop, to Mrs. Pearson. This is the third time this lady has been before the altar in the character of a bride, and there has been something remarkable in each of her three matrimonial engagements. Her first husband was a Quaker; her second, a Roman Catholic; and her third, a Protestant of the Established Church. Every husband was twice her age; at sixteen she married a gentleman of 32; at 30, she took one of 60, and now, at 42, she is united to a gentleman of 64."

CANTON'S INDUSTRY PROBLEM

Factory Control Not Yet Settled

British Interest In Financing

Canton, July 1. A thorny problem which is at present facing the authorities here is the future of the Government-controlled industries. There are, in all, some fifteen factories of various kinds, in respect of which it is stated, there is some $12,000,000 outstanding, mostly for the cost of the establishments and machinery.

General Wu Teh-chien considers that these factories should come under the Provincial Government direct, this being the procedure under General Chang Chai-tong's administration. General Wu Ching-tong, the Minister of Reconstruction, has, however, been reluctant to hand over control to the Provincial Government, and has assumed supervision himself.

General Wu referred the matter for solution to the Nanking authorities, who, in turn, requested Mr. T. V. Soong to solve the issue. Mr. Soong's visit afforded him an opportunity to inspect the industries and to devise a practical method by which all parties would be satisfied. After due consideration and having found it beyond his vision to please all parties, Mr. Soong now suggests forming a financial syndicate under the banking members' control to take over the factories. It now evolves itself into a three-party conflict, and no other personality than Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek can settle the matter. Competent observers in Canton consider it best to turn the industries over to suitable parties free from political influence.

In some quarters it is felt that Governor Wu has a very difficult role to play. The province of Kwangtung has always been noted for Cantonese aggressiveness. To force issues therefore, might result in nothing being accomplished.

AGRICULTURAL SCHEME

At a meeting of Chinese bankers here Governor Wu outlined a scheme by which he proposed a three-year plan for agricultural reconstruction. The plan calls for $30,000,000 to be spent each year. One section deals with rice production and calls for an expenditure of $30,000,000 over a period of three years to enable production of 10,000,000 piculs of rice. Areas now under water, or land now considered waste, due to lack of irrigation, are to be treated by remedies such as competent engineers will prescribe. The delta section near the mouth of the Pearl River will be dammed and the water used to irrigate nearby areas.

It is estimated that $20,000,000 each year will be needed to carry out the building of roads and bridges, reinforcing areas in the country and assisting the farmers to increase production.

A three-year programme will utilise $90,000,000 of which $30,000,000 will be used for rice production and $60,000,000 for general agricultural reconstruction.

Chinese bankers have been requested to formulate a definite scheme of finance by the time the Chairman of the Province returns to Canton from Nanking. The amount asked for is considerable and financiers are confronted with difficulties of finding securities that could warrant a loan. It appears that the bankers have been asked to co-operate in the form of a committee with the Governor and to find ways to raise the money and its security. Perhaps Governor Wu will petition Nanking to act as security for an Agricultural Reconstruction Bond issue.

Independent financiers consider the scheme sympathetically but cannot find suitable forms of security which could be offered to permit finalisation of a loan to carry out the work.

has tattoo marks similar to those on the arms of the man seen in the company of the slain girls.

Taken to police headquarters, Dow was subjected to a searching physical examination. A physician, detectives state, said afterwards: "He might have been the man."

JUST IN FROM ARIZONA
The arrested man told officers he had just got from Arizona that day, but, they said, he was unable to give a clear account of his movements during the past week.

In his pockets, detectives state, was a girl's handkerchief and a roller skate key. Dow said: "I just picked them up." The key and handkerchief were taken at once to a laboratory for examination by the parents of the dead children.

IS THIS THE SAME MAN?
At the same time radio gars blocked off the Ellysian Park section after a motorist had reported that he saw a man answering the kidnapper-murderer's description drive into the area in a dilapidated automobile after picking up two small boy hikers.

The hunt, too, has switched towards the Mojave Desert, east of San Bernardino. Police found a paper bag containing a blood-stained shirt, bits of rope and a pair of shoes, and held two men for questioning.—United Press.

they had to support their families, a large number of whom were in provinces where the national dollar was being circulated. As their pay was in local currency, to remit funds would mean a heavy loss.

Mr. Soong's visit to Canton this time did not leave him much time to formulate a definite programme of reconstructional activities, but on one or two occasions he utilised his contact with financiers to induce investment of Chinese funds in Kwangtung. Every indication of a favourable reception to his request is evident, but it seems questionable whether any feasible proposals have been put forward.

BRITISH INTEREST
A very strong and influential group of British financiers has been in negotiation with the local authorities for some time, and it is understood that the Central authorities are also carrying out certain negotiations with this group.

The proposal is a very comprehensive one and in time will contribute to the reconstruction of the province. Competent financial authorities are in complete agreement with the scheme and high officials have given every support.

A proposal of this type should be well received in Chinese and British circles where a Sino-British rapprochement has been sought for some time.—An Occasional Correspondent.

Insurgents Capture Basque Port

Population Stays To Greet Army Of Conqueror

Hendaye, July 1. After a land and sea bombardment, the Spanish Insurgents captured the Biscayan seaport of Castro Urdiales, 25 miles east of Santander.

Insurgent frontier despatches report the majority of the population refused to flee, preferring "enthusiastically to greet the incoming army."

General Franco's headquarters now estimates that 40,000 Loyalists were slain, in the siege of Bilbao and 100,000 wounded.

Meanwhile, there have been bombing attacks on Bilbao.

The Insurgents, however, have retaliated with an attack on Loyalist positions between Castro Urdiales and Valmaseda, where 20 machines dropped 200-pound bombs in great numbers.—United Press.

Lull Around Madrid

St. Jean de Luz, July 1. The main fighting at present is along the Santander front, where the Insurgents claim to have advanced, inflicting heavy losses on the Government defenders and capturing much war material.

There is a lull in the Madrid fighting, but the Insurgents are expected to make a big drive for the former capital after the capture of Santander, which they confidently expect will fall into their hands very shortly.—Reuters Bulletin Service.

Unions Have No Place In Newspapers

Publishers Oppose Organisation In Editorial Circles

Chicago, July 1. American newspaper publishers went on record to-day as being unalterably opposed "to the closed shop or any other form of closed shop, for those who prepare and edit the news and pictures for newspapers."

A resolution to this effect was adopted unanimously late yesterday at a convention of newspaper publishers from all parts of the United States. The publishers declared their determination not to enter into any agreement with their editorial departments upon a closed shop basis.

"No newspaper can command confidence in the fairness of its presentation if it selects all employees from only one political party, one religious denomination or any one group devoted to a single cause," the resolution said.—United Press.

NUDE JAPANESE BATHERS SHIP'S OFFICERS FAIL TO ATTEND COURT

Three Japanese officers of the Bokuyō Maru were summoned before Mr. K. M. A. Barnett at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning on a charge of indecent exposure at Taiwan Beach, Hung Hong, on July 1.

The defendants were Kiji Someya, 29, junior 2nd wireless officer; Kensei Yokobayashi, 4th officer; and Katsuri Kikumoto, 20, 2nd wireless officer.

Defendants did not appear in Court. Their bail of $25 each was forfeited.

Gold Buying Rate Fixed By France

128.75 Francs To Pound Sterling

Paris, July 1. The Banque de France has fixed the buying price for gold at 28,959 francs a kilo, which is equivalent to an exchange rate for sterling of 128.75 francs.—Reuters.

AGREEMENT CONTINUES

Washington, July 1. Mr. Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the U.S. Treasury, has announced that the tri-partite monetary agreement will continue. Britain, France and the United States are original signatories, while Belgium, Switzerland and Holland co-operate in the scheme.—Reuters.

BOURSES HOLD GAINS

Paris, July 1. The Bourses held their gains to-day despite late profit-taking. The franc declined rapidly to 1028 levels.—United Press.

TRI-PARTY PACT SAFE

Washington, July 1. At the end of all-night negotiations with Britain and France, Mr. Henry Morgenthau announced that the tri-partite agreement would continue.

In a message to the French Finance Minister, M. Georges Bonnet, he expressed the hope that co-operation would continue and the France would soon emerge from her difficulties.

Mr. Morgenthau stated that the technical arrangements of the tri-partite pact were still unchanged and stressed the point that serious disturbances would thus be prevented as a result of the French crisis.—United Press.

BRITAIN'S HOPES

London, July 1. Asked in the House of Commons if he had received any intimation from the French Government as to their attitude towards the tripartite currency agreement, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Simon, stated that the French Government had assured him that it was anxious to continue close co-operation with the Governments of the United States of America and the United Kingdom.

He had today sent the following reply to the French Minister of Finance: "Now that you, as French Minister of Finance, have been given the full powers which you sought to deal with the present situation, I look forward to a continuation of the close co-operation between our Treasuries under the tripartite declaration. I desire to express my sincere hope that France will soon emerge from the temporary difficulties with which she is now confronted."

Sir John added that he understood that a similar message was being sent to the French Minister of Finance by the Secretary of the United States Treasury.—British Wireless.

But apparently the Non-Intervention Committee had decided that the Geneva Convention does not apply to the Spanish war, the statement adds.—Reuters.

"Situation Obviously Serious"

Paris, July 1. "The situation is obvious," said M. Yvon Delbos, French Foreign Minister, in a statement to the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Chamber of Deputies to-day, when questioned regarding the tension created by the Spanish situation. But he had never considered it tragic, he added.

The position could only improve as a result of a policy of firmness and perfect understanding with Great Britain, he declared.

M. Delbos added that France would continue to firmly uphold the Non-Intervention Agreement and an effective control plan.—Reuters.

CALLS HIMSELF PRICE

Havana, Cuba, July 1. Count Covadonga, who took this title when he renounced his rights to the Spanish throne at the request of his father, ex-King Alfonso, announced to-day he would marry a second time on Saturday, the bride being Miss Rocafort. He is abandoning his present title, he says, and assuming that of Prince Alfonso de Bourbon, and his wife will be a princess.—United Press.

The highway robbery on June 18 in which a man named Kam Ko was robbed and stripped of his clothing, had a sequel at the Central Magistracy this morning, when, before Mr. W. Schofield Ho Tak, 32, street cooler, and Hung Shu, 21, boxing instructor, were charged with the crime. Detective Sub-Inspector W. Darkin said the case was for a criminal and asked for 72 hours' remand in police custody, which was granted.

RUSSIAN COOK OVERBOARD FROM EMPRESS

The voyage from Canada of the Empress of Canada which arrived here this morning was not without incident. When the ship was slowing up at the Quarantine Anchorage in Yokohama, a Russian, John Kupas, cook, attached to the U.S. Army in Manila, and for many years a resident of the United States, years a resident of the United States, jumped overboard, being apparently over-anxious to land. He was rescued and since then has been under observation.

Two Filipinos taken aboard at Honolulu, where they had been working on sugar plantations, were kept in the ship's "brig" throughout the voyage. Both had become mentally unbalanced shortly before sailing.

When the liner was berthing at Vancouver on her last homeward voyage a photographer had a particularly lucky "break". He had climbed to the roof of a 20-storey building near the foot of the pier to obtain a good "shot" of the liner as it berthed. He was rewarded with three photographs showing the liner as she bore down on the pier, and, finally, as she hit it, tore the cement and inflicted $5,000 damages to her bows.

Public Fleeced On Epsom Downs AUTHORITIES MUST STOP DERBY DAY RAMP

(By John Macadam)

That well-known operation—the killing of the goose that lays the golden egg—is nowhere carried out with such expert precision as on Epsom Downs on Derby Day, and it is the proud duty of this department to call the attention of you, and you, and you to the whole ramp. Last year we pleaded for the portable tote that would carry fair betting to the people on the Hill opposite the stands. We pointed out the merciless price-cutting that went on among the innocents who were cut off from the official tote and the reputable bookmakers—the authorities did nothing about it—and here it is happening all over again.

My colleague, John Robertson, roving about on the Hill, saw instances after instance of persons calling themselves bookmakers who were accepting bets for horses that weren't down to run. The holiday crowds, many of them not having been at a race-meeting since last Derby Day and without glasses, didn't know. But Robertson was marking his card with the aid of his glasses, and he did know. He saved a few humble backers from throwing their shillings and half-crowns away, but he didn't endear himself to the boys on the soap-boxes.

ACTUAL INSTANCES

Here are actual instances from Wednesday: Bleu de Roi was quoted generally on the Downs at 7-1. It was returned at 33-1. That was in the first race. In the second, Hay Fever could be backed at from 6-1 to 10-1 outside. Official starting price was 20-1. Look at those prices!

Horse	Down	Official
Midday Sun	5-1	100-7
Scarlet Plume	50-1	100-1
Renardo	10-1	20-1
Gainsborough Lass	10-1	100-7
Cash Book	5-1	7-1
Perifox	5-1	7-1
Le Knar	5-1	0-1
Le Grand Duc	5-1	100-0

So there you are. You can see just how easy it is to make a book under these conditions—take all the money you like at 50-1 and save yourself at 100-1.

The men who are playing this game are not regular accredited bookmakers. They are the fly-by-nights who get hold of a stand and a name for the day only. But—do they show a profit?

There is only one way to stop them, and that is for the authorities to install the tote out there—without wasting any time. They say it can't be done, but I know plenty of ways.

BIT OF WELSHING

Actually, I am told that there was quite a bit of welshing on the part of the fraternity, and if the authorities don't take the matter up and get the tote installed, the reputable bookmakers ought to for the sake of their own good names. After all, these shysters get the whole profession in wrong, and there ought to be some way of keeping them out.

So the shyest woman in the history of the turf has pulled out the gamut, biggest plum. When I was casting around for a Derby angle, the old eye around for the name of Mrs. G. B. Miller. Who, I asked, was Mrs. G. B. Miller? Nobody seemed to know off-hand, and the only thing to do was to ring her up and ask her herself.

Mrs. Miller was as loquacious as a

County Cricket

YORKSHIRE WINS BY AN INNINGS

Hutton Hits Century

London, July 1. Yorkshire's bid to recapture the county cricket championship continued to-day when the Tykes beat Essex by an innings and 208 runs.

Leslie Hutton atoned for his failure in the Test match by scoring another century, his 124 being made out of a total of 440.

Essex never shaped like scoring runs. In their first innings they were sent back for 132 and following on, they were thoroughly cowed by Verity, who took 8 for 10, and were dismissed for a mere 80 runs.

BASKETBALL STARS

Filipino Players Passing Through Hongkong

On their way to Shanghai for a series of matches, a team of Filipino all-star basketball players will arrive in Hongkong this morning by the s.s. President McKinley.

Most of the players were members of the Philippines team that took part in the World Olympic Games at Berlin last year. They are therefore one of the strongest aggregation of players in the country.

Local enthusiasts will be given a treat this evening when the visitors engage the Chinese Y.M.C.A. in a match at Bridges Street, commencing at 7 p.m.

Only one game will be played as the team will leave for the North at midnight. However, it is possible that more matches will be arranged when the visitors pass through again on their way home.

WOMEN'S DOUBLES HOLDERS ARE DEFEATED

Four Nations In Men's Doubles Semi-Finals

BUDGE IN HIS SECOND FINAL

WIMBLEDON hustled to-day, and in a series of important matches decided (a) the women's singles finalists, (b) the men's doubles semi-finalists (c) filled one position in the final bracket of the mixed doubles and polished off the rest of the quarter-final matches in this event, (d) three of the four positions in the semi-finals of the women's doubles were filled.

Most important ties of the day, of course, were the women's singles semi-finals. They saw Mlle. Jedzejowska of Poland reach the ultimate stage for the first time in her career, and Miss Dorothy Round of Britain sustain her "comeback" by eliminating Mme. Mathieu of France.

Semi-finalists in the men's doubles are Donald Budge and Gene Mako (U.S.), G. von Cramm and H. Henkel (Germany), R. Menzel and L. Heet (Czechoslovakia) and G. P. Hughes and C. R. D. Tuckey (Britain). The Americans and the Germans meet in the next round, while the Czechs and Englishmen will contest the other bracket.

London, July 1. For the second successive day the weather was rather unpleasant at Wimbledon, the sky being overcast and a wind blowing down the courts in gusts. Conditions were anything but ideal.

Miss Alice Marble (U.S.) and Mlle. Jedzejowska (Poland) met in the first of the women's singles semi-finals on the Centre Court. The Polish girl won 8-6, 6-2, and thoroughly deserved her success. Her heavily cut backhand shots forced Miss Marble into errors.

The American had a set point at 5-3, but Mlle. Jedzejowska, returning everything, prevented Miss Marble's famous dashes to the net. The Polish girl led 6-5 and had four set points before winning the set in the fourteenth game.

Miss Dorothy Round proved too good for Mme. Mathieu beating her 6-4, 6-0.

Miss Round's placing and volleying was better than that of her opponent, though the match was largely a baseline duel. The Frenchwoman led 3-2 in the first set, but Miss Round recovered to forge ahead at 4-3. In the second set Miss Round was brilliant and left Mme. Mathieu standing.

JAPANESE OUTPLAYED

There were some wonderful matches in the men's doubles. Meeting in the quarter-final, G. P. Hughes and C. R. D. Tuckey (Britain) beat Jiro Yamagishi and Nakano (Japan) in straight sets of 6-2, 6-2, 6-2.

The Japanese played too far apart, allowing the British pair to hit between them. Yamagishi was the better of the losers, finely retrieving smashes, and himself smashing well. Nakano occasionally volleyed strongly, but he was weak overhead.

The Japanese made the mistake of feeding the winners with short lobs which were easily killed.

England's second string men's doubles were eliminated when F. H. D. Wilde and C. E. Hare were beaten by G. von Cramm and H. Henkel (Germany) after four strenuously contested sets.

Budge and Mako, the American pair had a close encounter with Clifford Sproule and John Bromwich of Australia, finally winning in the fourth set.

There was a very real sensation in the women's doubles, when the holders, Mrs. K. Stammers and Mrs. Freda James, lost to Mrs. Pittman and Mrs. L. King in straight sets of 6-1, 7-5.

Mrs. D. B. Andrus and Mlle. Henrotin followed up their sparkling display against Miss Jacobs and Mrs. Spierling, by beating Miss McOstrich and Miss Jean Saunders in straight sets. The Franco-American couple meet Mrs. Pittman and Mrs. King in the next round.

Another upset in this event was the elimination of Miss Round and Miss Mary Heeley by Miss Dearman and Miss Joan Ingram. It was a close match, the scores being 9-7, 7-5.

Gene Mako and Mlle. Jedzejowska played two mixed doubles ties. In the quarter-finals they defeated R. K. Tindler and Miss Margot Lumb of Britain and later met D. Budge and Miss A. Marble in the semi-final and lost in two sets.

In another quarter-final encounter, Yamagishi and Miss Dotty Nuttall were rather unexpectedly beaten by Dr. Daniel Prenn and Miss Dearman.

Playing in the third round of the All-England Plate, in which only those who were beaten in the first and second rounds of the Wimbledon men's and women's singles are eligible to compete, J. Pelra of France took defeat 6-0, 11-9—Reuter.

'Ghost' Of Bobby Jones Plays Irons On Her Toes

Turnberry (Ayrshire), June 10. America and Australia had a great match in the British Women's Open golf championship here this morning.

While the rest of the world followed the Pam Barton-Mrs. Holm fight, I was the solitary spectator of the game between Miss Peggy Nankivell, green-jumpered, tweed-skirted player from Melbourne, and Miss Barbara ("on the toes") Thompson, the only surviving U.S.A. representative, writes a Daily Express reporter.

I thought the better player lost. Metaphorically, Miss Thompson, with the sight of the fourth round, held out her hands to Miss Nankivell and said, "I don't want to win, you go instead."

And go Miss Nankivell did. Still, Miss Thompson had something to teach me. It was how to play a full iron shot.

Oddly, as I watched her (she was wearing dark glasses, a pink blouse, and a powder-blue skirt), I thought I saw the ghost of Bobby Jones.

It is the way she gets on to her toes, especially as she hits her iron shot.

As she addresses the ball she doesn't waggle, but three times, in quick succession, puts the club down on the ground behind it.

You may say "Just habit." I don't believe it. It seems to me that while that is going on she is gradually shifting the weight of her body to the left leg so that she will hit against a firm left side.

So far, the arms are loose, hanging naturally from the side; then, a split second before she begins to take the club back, she seems to stretch them out, tighten them.

Now she is swinging, the left arm straight out, a rolling pin. Now she is coming down, and (watch this carefully) at the moment of impact she is right on her toes. Just like a ballet dancer.

The movement is quite palpable. It enables her to get all the weight of her body into the shot, and, believe me, she does.

Miss Dorothy Round, finalist in the women's singles at Wimbledon for the second time.

DOROTHY ROUND IS BEATEN BY NO. 3

(By Ulysses Rogers)

Beckenham, June 10. Miss Dorothy Round, Great Britain's No. 1, after fighting over two hours for her tennis life, was defeated this afternoon by the persistent Mrs. M. R. King (rank No. 3) in the third round of the Kent championships. It took Mrs. King three terrific sets of hard driving before she put out her famous opponent with a score 9-7, 2-6, 12-10.

Mrs. King is short in stature and intensely active. Since the time she came into prominence as Miss Phyllis Mudford, she has probably run more miles on tennis courts than any living woman. Not even excepting the long-limbed Mme. Spierling.

Wherever she goes, back and forth, up and down, Mrs. King carries a charming smile with her that makes her a popular favourite, win or lose.

Her game is not particularly varied. She takes the ball mostly shoulder high and swings it on its way with round arm sweeps, putting all the force of her petite body into the blows.

How she kept up this terrible running and smiting at highest pressure for forty-six games is a wonder in itself.

Miss Round looked as though the match was in her hands when she led at the start 5-3. The determined little woman with a smile not only pulled her back from this lead but overhauled her and notched the first set at 9-7.

Honours were easy when the Dudley Idol, with superior accuracy and beautiful backhand drives, took the second set at 6-2. Then the really great fight began.

Mrs. King ran and swiped her way ahead to 4-2. Miss Round levelled.

It was level pegging again, 9—all. At length, from 40—love in that final game, Mrs. King, with three more match points, ran out.

Just before, Miss Mary Hardwick went down to Miss Alice Marble, the American champion, 6-1, 3-6, 6-4.

TO-DAY'S CLASSIC AT WIMBLEDON

VON CRAMM OR BUDGE AS NEW CHAMPION?

(By "Veritas")

THERE are two or three interesting features about the final of the men's singles tennis championship which will be played on the Centre Court at Wimbledon this afternoon. For the first time for four years neither of the contestants are Englishmen: Baron Gottfried von Cramm will be figuring in his third successive final: it will be Donald Budge's first.

What is the likely outcome of to-day's classic match? Or perhaps I should be on very much safer ground if I said, what is the possible outcome? For these two perfect specimens of tennis craft are so well matched that nobody could expect to get better than evens on the match.

Records do not help a great deal. These are not dozens of the international tennis court, who, like Perry and Crawford, for example, have met anything up to a dozen times in various championships and tournaments. Actually they have met twice at Wimbledon—once in the championship, and once in the Davis Cup. Both matches were played in 1935 and they won one apiece.

"EMBODIMENT OF ALL THE VIRTUES"

Meeting in the 1935 Wimbledon semi-final, von Cramm beat the young American, then making his first appearance in England after a match which H. S. Scrivenor, famous English tennis critic, described as "the embodiment of all the virtues of baseline play, lusty hitting, clever placing whether in attack or defence, and almost impeccable accuracy".

The scores in von Cramm's favour in that historic match were 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2, and Mr. Scrivenor said he attributed the German's victory to the fact that he was a shade more steadfast.

However, if only to disprove that von Cramm had any sort of distinct edge over him, Budge proceeded to beat the German, ace three weeks later in the European Zone final of the Davis Cup, winning in brilliant fashion by 6-8, 9-7, 8-6, 6-3, 11-9.

It was Budge's performance in this tie which placed him in the forefront of international tennis players, and convinced the critics that a new world's champion was on the horizon. To-day will prove whether Budge will fulfil that prophecy.

If anything I would say that Budge has a slight margin in his favour to-day if only because history has shown that during the last two years he has improved enormously, whereas it is doubtful whether his keenest critics could claim that von Cramm has done more than remain as good as he was in 1935 and 1936.

Furthermore Budge's highly impressive progress through five rounds at Wimbledon during the past week and a half has indicated that he is now at the peak of his form. To win through to a Wimbledon final with the loss of but a single set is sufficient to justify the warmest confidence in that player's ability to win the title.

Baron von Cramm has had at least one narrow escape from defeat. He only just beat Jack Crawford in the quarter-final and his match on Wednesday with Austin was significant inasmuch that the Englishman discovered his opponent to be vulnerable on the backhand.

Nevertheless one would be guilty of losing perspective by placing too much importance on the manner in which finalists at Wimbledon have won their earlier matches. The fact that Budge and von Cramm are 6-4.

WILL NOT BE LAZY: Joe Louis, who dethroned James Braddock the world's heavyweight champion in a recent fight, will not remain idle, says his promoter.

LOUIS NOT TO BE IDLE CHAMPION

SAYS PROMOTER

Chicago, Illinois, June 23. Joe Louis, new heavyweight champion of the world, told newsmen here to-day there was one reason why he came off the floor to knock the crown off Jimmy Braddock's head. The Detroit negro battler, second dusky champion in the history of heavyweight boxing, said "Max Schmeling taught me to climb into my shell when hit. Braddock dropped me in the first round. Instead of piling in as I did after Schmeling hit me in the second round, I boxed and took my time."

The Brown Bomber, who scored a knockout over Braddock at the White Sox Stadium here last night, said as he looked toward the future "I will fight any man any time they tell me to fight."

Promoter Mike Jacobs renewed his contract with the new champ for five years, guaranteeing Louis four fights each year. Jacobs said he signed a three year contract with Braddock guaranteeing him action.

Braddock, through his cut lips, said "I lost the championship but I came out fighting and I went down fighting. If I get a couple of tough fights under my belt I'll lick him yet. I know after the first round that my two year layoff had done me no good, I was tired. I made a big mistake not using the right up-percut which dropped Joe in the first round."

After Braddock's 50 per cent. share of the new receipts are cut up he will be lucky to have $60,000, which probably exceeds what he cleared since he won the title. Louis, taking 17½ per cent. for himself and his associates, has earned approximately $850,000 in less than three years. Jacobs said the fight grossed $715,420 and that the paid attendance was 41,604.

HIT SIXES OVER THE PAVILION

At Bradford: Yorkshire won by 287 runs.

London, June 10. CRICKET at Bradford yesterday was more than bright. It was dazzling.

This is what happened before lunch. Yorkshire, two hours batting, floored the Kent bowlers for 254 runs. Arthur Mitchell hit magnificently. In the first half-hour scored 75. Got four 6's; nine 4's. A ball from Woolley landed on the top of the foot-ball stand.

Smalles had seventy minutes at the wicket. Knocked out 89 not out. A 6, a 5, twelve 4's. His driving was fierce. Bill Boun-dary!

Yorkshire declared at lunch: 328 for seven. Frank Woolley (fifty years of age) captured six wickets for 125. Bravo, the veteran!

More sensations in the afternoon. Kent lost their first four wickets for one run! Smalles did it. His in-swingers were deadly. The procession continued.

Last man in. Name of Watt. The match was as good as lost. But Watt had a go. Banged Verity for four 6's—over or on top of the football pavilion. Watt made 37 in thirteen minutes. The joy of it! Then his partner was out. Kent total 84. Yorkshire had won by 287. Smalles five wickets for 16.

The Yorkshire batting explosion and the Kent following-up produced altogether ten 6's, a 5, and thirty-eight 4's. Real cricket—and then some.

Surprise For China's Swimming Champion

MISS THIRWELL BEATS MISS YEUNG

Miss Veronica Thirlwell, of the V.R.C., gave Miss Yeung Sau-king, Olympic Swimmer, a surprise at the South China gala at North Point last night, when she beat her by a touch in the 400 metres open. They were the only competitors and the time was not exceptional. It was an exciting race.

Despite a rally in the second half, a water polo team from the Royal Engineers and Navy was defeated by the odd goal in five by a South China side. In the first period, H. Loung scored twice for the winners, the servicemen making no reply. After the interval, Norman Lee added the third.

Patrickson and Livesey scored for the losers.

Alice Marble, 6-1, Was Best Bet For Wimbledon On June 10

Donald Budge is an even chance for Wimbledon, according to the bookmakers. Good as the young Californian is, I should doubt whether there are any takers at this price in a field of 128, writes Gordon Westley.

G. Von Cramm, the German ace, in view of his recent indisposition and his many defeats this year, seems to be too highly placed as second favourite. The best bet in my view are H. Henkel at 7-1, J. Crawford at 10-1, and a good outside chance is Khe Sin Kie, the Chinese Davis Cup player, at 25-1.

Mme. Sperling is favourite for the women's singles at 2-1, but so great has been the improvement of Miss Alice Marble's play at St. George's Hill Club, Weybridge, tournament, which concluded yesterday, that I consider she is the best bet at 6-1.

To-day's Classic At Wimbledon

Analysts proves only that they are evenly matched.

ANOTHER "BETE NOIR"?
Comparing the two I think there is no question but that von Cramm is the more stylish and "correct" player. His artistry is superb, and not even Austin can play better "book" tennis. What is more von Cramm will invariably score over Austin because he can play a severer type of game without losing his masterful accuracy and beauty of stroke.

But to-day von Cramm will be against a player much more of the Perry type than any other of the German's contemporaries. We all know that Perry has been the German's bete noir, and many are prepared to believe that now—Budge has strengthened his game in all departments and learnt to take an earlier ball, he will become Perry's successor as "bogy" to von Cramm's Wimbledon aspirations.

Budge offers an unusual problem to any player because he is one of those few people who can beat a stronger backhand than front hand. In 1935 and last year this reacted against him, because then his forehand was relatively weak, and opponents could attack it. Parenthetically it might be noted that it is a tribute to the genius of Perry that he concentrated on Budge's strongest point—the backhand—eventually wearing it down so that the American's chief means of attack was reduced to comparative impotency. It is interesting to speculate from this distance whether von Cramm to-day will be bold enough, and capable enough, to adopt similar tactics.

Even if he decides not to, he will be confronted with the disconcerting knowledge that Budge has now improved on the forehand wing so much that it is almost on a par with his backhand. Budge, in fact, is now a fully equipped player. He has eliminated former weaknesses, such as a running forehand drive, and a speculative overhead. In short he is ready to take over the mantle that was Fred Perry's.

ONE BIG ADVANTAGE
One big factor which must tell in favour of von Cramm is his previous experience of the Centre Court in a championship final. This is his third successive appearance, and it is fair to believe that he benefited to some extent from his matches with Perry even though in the first he was outclassed and in the second he was injured. Despite this he should possess a psychological advantage, and he is a man who will readily make use of that advantage.

NEWPORT COUNTY SIGN DERBY FULL BACK

London, June 10.
Football transfer market was again active yesterday. Jack Webb, reserve Derby full-back, club a long association with the club, by signing for Newport County.

Webb, who at present is mascot to the Derbyshire cricket club, went to Derby from a Wearside League team in 1927, but made only twenty-five League appearances for Derby. He was placed on the open to transfer list at the end of last season.

Doncaster Rovers were also busy, completed transfer negotiations for E. Allen, Fulham outside left, who has been at Craven Cottage for three seasons.

He formerly played for Clapton Orient as an amateur, was an English schoolboy international. Fee is said to be £350.

Ted Davis resigned from the management of Bath City on being appointed manager of Colchester Town, the new Southern League club. He has been manager of Bath for ten years, transferred Boulton to Arsenal.

Alan Todd, goalkeeper, leaves Port Vale, joins Nottm. Forest, and as part of the deal Masters, inside Forest forward or winger, goes to Port Vale.

Aberdeen defeated Orange Free State 2-0 at Bloemfontein yesterday, states Reuter. They have won five of the six games played.

If Budge plays better to-day than a year ago, he will win; if he does not, I shall expect to see von Cramm figure as the new amateur champion of the world.

In common with most of my readers, I am sure, I would give a lot to be on the Centre Court this afternoon, for the odds are von Cramm and Budge will serve up the most classic Wimbledon final since Jack Crawford beat Ellsworth Vines in 1933.

Two Cases Of "Resurrection"

"Dead" Come To Life Again

Two cases of "resurrection" in Chinese villages have been reported near Shanghai since the beginning of the week, the country folk being almost frightened to death upon seeing the "dead" come to life again.

The first report was that of a farmer named Shan Hsing-shen, who died in the Taoshing district within the jurisdiction of Greater Shanghai, at about 4 o'clock on Monday afternoon. Early next morning while the relatives and friends were preparing for his funeral, he suddenly arose, causing a terrific pandemonium among them.

Investigation revealed that the man had been suffering from paralysis for some time and on Monday his heart stopped beating. Next morning, however, he suddenly revived and after a few minutes could talk. He is still lying in a weak condition.

Late on Tuesday evening another resurrection story was reported by the Chinese press. A despatch from Soochow stated that a farmer's wife who died in her home in the Hsiang Cheng Village on Sunday, also returned to life after her family wept for her. When the woman showed signs of life the frightened relatives fled. When they returned the woman was again showing no signs of life. Just then the coffin arrived, and the body of the woman was placed in it. The cover was not put on the coffin, to allow the relatives to have a last glimpse of the woman. Early on Monday morning the woman again showed signs of life and was taken out of the coffin. Now she is reported to be talking and eating once again.

The coffin, which had been bought on credit, will be returned to the undertakers, states the vernacular press.

This Partnership may RESCUE SPAIN

Says Victor Schiff

(recently returned from the Spanish War Front).

JUAN NEGRIN, the new Spanish Premier, is one of the cleverest and most energetic men in the whole Government and perhaps even Spain's best man.

The first time I saw him I could hardly discern his features. It was one of the queerest interviews I have ever had as a journalist.

I met him after midnight on my way back from the Madrid telephone buildings to my hotel with an English friend. We were both tired and thirsty after having spent the whole day in the burning sun on the Toledo front.

All cars were already closed. "I know where we can get some refreshment," said my friend, "a night club just behind the next corner." The side street was completely dark.

It was something like Piccadilly Circus at midnight, without the lights and plus the militia's uniforms.

My English friend picked out a man in the middle of troops. "Hullo," he said, as he tapped his broad shoulder in the traditional Spanish manner. "Como esta Usted?"

To me he said: "May I introduce you to my friend, Professor Negrin, the Minister of Finance? He speaks French, German, English, Dutch—whatever you like."

I had a glimpse in the semi-darkness of a man with a round face, golden spectacles, black moustache, thick-lipped, and with a bright, broad smile.

"Let us talk in German," I suggested, "since I should have taken you for a German University professor if I had met you somewhere else."

In almost perfect German, Senor Negrin told me that he had spent a long time in Germany and Austria. Then we spoke about the war, the international situation, and the prospects of the peace. Meanwhile, he exchanged friendly pats on the shoulder with dozens of passing men, who seemed to find it quite natural to see him just there at just that time of night.

"I am canvassing my electors," he said, with a bright smile to me. "It is in the heart of my constituency. Come and see me at my office in the Ministry. We can have a wider talk." And he vanished into the darkness.

It was three months later, that I was again able to see him. The Spanish Treasury had meanwhile moved with the rest of the Government to Valencia. It had settled there in one of the old aristocratic palaces.

The Ministry was like an ant hill. In every corner conferences were being held with officials and delegations from all parts of the Government territory.

"How are you, comrade?" The broad-shouldered man whom I had met the last time at Madrid's "Piccadilly Circus" after midnight shouted in German and in a friendly manner took me through the huge ante-room which was separated from his office only by a thick curtain. He told me to come in.

Now, for the first time, I saw him by daylight and discerned that his intelligent face was lightly-pocked marked. In less than an hour's talk I was given the most comprehensive survey of the situation in Spain from the internal, the military, the diplomatic, the financial and the economic angle. He knew almost everything, and when he could not find the right word in German he had it in English or French.

INDALECIO PRIETO "would kill himself by work for the Spanish Republic."

"Where did you study economics?" I asked him.

"Never, except privately," he said. "I always was a medical man. In fact, I had completely forgotten about it." He is by profession a University professor of Biology.

Negrin was mentioned in Spanish political quarters as the possible Premier three months ago, when the first rumours about a possible Cabinet crisis in Valencia were in circulation.

A well-known Spanish statesman, much devoted to Largo Caballero, brushed his name aside when I mentioned it to him. "Negrin—that would only mean that Indalecio Prieto would be actually Prime Minister, and it would be too dangerous a test for the United Front against Fascism," he said to me.

The whole personal and political rivalry between Largo Caballero, Left wing leader of the Socialist Party, and Indalecio Prieto, leader of the Moderate wing, was still too strong.

The presence of both in the same Cabinet—although hardly on speaking terms—was as near a miracle as co-operation between the Spanish trade union leaders and the Anarchists. Only the need to meet the Fascist danger could have achieved such a miracle.

But, meanwhile, the situation had evolved. The Communists complained that Caballero was too old to adapt himself to rapidly changing circumstances, that he was too much of a doctrinaire, too stubborn in his bias, and not active enough.

They felt much more favourably inclined towards the tremendously active, much more practically-minded Prieto and Negrin.

But this is not a time for quibbling. It is a time for action. If Fascism is to be beaten.

Prieto is a man who works, if necessary, 18 hours a day. This small, stout man, with a double or treble chin, seems to have just jumped out of the frame of the picture representing a scene in a Spanish manufactory.

His collar and the pouches under his eyes are the marks of a man who badly needs treatment by a heart specialist, but Prieto would rather kill himself by work for the defence of the Spanish Republic than take the rest he needs from his labours.

As Minister of Air and Marine in the former Government, he soon found out that there existed no adequate organisation for supplying the fighting forces with arms and ammunition. So he decided to settle that most vital problem of the war himself, not only for the Navy and Air Force but also for the Army.

Thus he became, with the tacit consent of Caballero, Minister of Munitions.

In Indalecio Prieto's memoirs, if he ever has time to write them, he would certainly be extremely dramatic on that subject. How this astute man managed, in spite of non-intervention by the democratic Powers, to have enough airplanes, bombs, shells, tanks and guns—at the same time, building up a national armaments industry—to fight the rebels, who were amply supplied by the Fascist Powers, must make a stirring tale.

Prieto was struggling for the life of the democracy to which he has devoted all his life since he was a local Socialist in Bilbao, which is still represented by him in Parliament. He knows the price of liberty. Twice he was forced to flee his country on small motor-boats across the stormy Gulf of Biscay and to live as a refugee in France. Between his two exiles he was a Minister. His life was a series of ups and downs.

And I am told he is still subject to periods of depression and solitude. But his optimism always emerges.

Mr. Seymour Coombs, Mr. Dobbie, and a few others will remember a scene which they witnessed together in Prieto's vast office of the Spanish Admiralty building in Madrid, where we met him in the middle of September.

He told us about the first proofs of the German and Italian interference on the side of the rebels. He showed us bombs with the trade mark "R. I. S. T." from Düsseldorf—bombs that had fallen near Madrid without exploding.

But then he exploded himself. "And what about the democracies? They are strangling us with their unilateral arms embargo while we are defending the liberty, not only of Spain, but of all Europe."

"Do you want the Italians to seize the Balearic Islands, the Germans to settle in Morocco and control Gibraltar? And if not, why do they change international law at our expense?"

The two men have always intimately collaborated. The same thing could hardly be said about the President and Largo Caballero.

Our power to give our son would give him an infinitely happier and richer life—outside of his working hours.

Those two or three years spent at school instead of at the bench would return rich dividends later on in spiritual and mental enjoyment and development. To deny our son this potential wealth and happiness—the sort that money cannot buy—would be a sin which I cannot bring myself voluntarily to commit.

Every Body NEEDS PRAISE

In these days of hurry and strife, competition and unemployment, psycho-analysis are acquiring a great reputation and reaping an ever increasing harvest in dealing with mental troubles.

What man in the street cannot now juggle with such a phrase as "inferiority complex"? If a man is shy he has an inferiority complex. If he cannot enjoy himself in a crowd he is branded as a victim of the crowd and all pervading dread. To some he is an object of derision, in others he arouses a vague compassion. All eventually disregard him as an uninteresting and unenterprising person. He himself is hurt but not surprised. He simply retires more and more into his shell, with the result that, to the outer world, his inferiority becomes more marked than ever.

What would you suggest as a cure? Would you say to the unfortunate fellow, perhaps antagonised already by a degree of patronage in your attitude, "Really or stupid, you must pull yourself together and show us what you can do. Take a leaf out of Brown's book. Don't let what other people think put you off your stroke?"

Obvious and easy, isn't it? But not that is a cure. It is a cure only to find that Brown's ideas are accepted and Brown's poor jokes give him the reputation of a wit, while the one's own efforts are regarded with a look of faint surprise and discarded without an attempt at appreciation.

The Best Antidote

If you, and you, and you will only give a little attention to the inferiority complex, you will find that it is a very quiet and unobtrusive conversation only waiting for the warmth of friendship to bring them to the surface.

The boss who drops an occasional word of praise to his employees will infuse a new life into the work. No man can, or will, give of his best if he is being constantly criticised. A little sincere praise will go a long way towards eliminating the boredom and discontent which is liable to crop up in an office, and it will elicit more willing and therefore better work. Moreover, each employee will feel that he, or she, is really doing something well and, as a result, they will know that surge of well being and new faith in themselves which is the real antidote for an inferiority complex.

How often does one meet the family in which two children, of much the same ability, and provided with equal opportunities, turn out to be totally different. One is clever and has an attractive personality. The other is a mediocre, dull, and gloomy disposition. This seemingly natural or at least usual case, can in nearly every instance be attributed to parental faults.

The clever child is praised and encouraged and the confidence engendered in him, out of the best side of his nature; hence the happy disposition. The unfortunate younger or duller brother is treated as a definite second best. He feels the lack of interest in any praise he does manage to extract from parents too taken up with the other child, from whom they obtain a certain amount of reflected glory.

Incentive To Do Better

It is discouraging for a boy always to be goaded on by accounts of how well his more brilliant brother has done in study or sport. He wants to receive praise for his own efforts, be they ever so insignificant.

Each time praise is accorded the will to do even better is reborn. Given encouragement in his own work, apart from the praise of his parents, comparisons altogether, of his own comparisons with his brother's performances, dull little brother will soon learn to stand on his own feet and do well in both work and play. It may well be that the latent ability and good nature so long bottled up inside him and only released by judicious praise and encouragement will carry him up to and past the best of his hitherto more brilliant brother.

Not in the home, is it only the children who are often spoiled for a happy marriage of praise. Many an unhappy marriage which ended in the finality of the Divorce Courts might have been guided round the many traps and pitfalls by a word of praise and a little consideration at the right moment.

Every wife likes her husband to notice in addition to the household chattels, a new frock, or the chic way she has dressed her hair. No husband should ever take anything his wife does for granted. A good note to cheer for lunch, he should certainly say so, but he should not on any account praise indiscriminately, or most of the effect will be lost. A good note to cheer for lunch, he should certainly say so, but he should not on any account praise indiscriminately, or most of the effect will be lost. A good note to cheer for lunch, he should certainly say so, but he should not on any account praise indiscriminately, or most of the effect will be lost.

There is a story, very much to the point, told of a good and faithful wife who had been cooking perfect meals for her husband for over twenty years, without a word of praise for the last nineteen. One day she deliberately burned or otherwise spoiled everything she served. Her good man objected in no uncertain terms, whereupon the lady blandly replied:—

"Dear me, you do notice what you are eating. I wondered. You certainly have never given me any reason to suppose you would notice any difference." So, remember, all you husbands, that while you do not miraculously appear, work is entailed, and it is often much more uncomfortable to lean over a hot stove than to rest one's elbows on a desk.

And may all wives remember that your husband, requires the encouragement and praise. If he does not get it from you he will go elsewhere for it. You will feel neglected. And whose fault will it be?

The world to-day is crying out for kindness, peace, and goodwill. Each one of us can do much to lighten the burden of ourselves and our fellow-men by being ever ready with a word of praise—and I do not mean flattery—for although many people like flattery, every man, woman, and child needs praise.

PARENTS IN DEBATE

Shall He Continue at School—or.....?

(The following "discussion" between the parents of a boy at school will be read with interest by many parents who must some day be faced with a similar problem.)

Father Says:—

I AM the boy's father. I have recently been told that if I accept the scholarship to which my son is entitled, though his work in an examination he can go to a secondary school on two conditions. One is that I pay part fees; the other is that I must promise to keep him at school until he is at least sixteen.

I have thought the matter over long and carefully, and I have argued it out with my wife, whose opinion you will presently read, is the opposite to my own. And I have come to the conclusion that all things considered my son would be better off if I refused.

Even if we were comfortably off and I could afford to keep him at school until 16 or 17 I think I should still be inclined to refuse. But as things are, to keep him at school would involve considerable sacrifice both for my wife (who doesn't mind) and myself.

I do not think the result would be such as to justify this sacrifice. Here are my reasons, which I consider sufficiently convincing.

I believe that a secondary education, once a powerful advantage for any boy, no longer means what it did. It still means a great deal to any boy who is going into one of the professions, but these, owing to their cost, are not for my son.

He would have to fill one of the thousands of "clerical" positions which are the normal lot of a secondary school boy, and my position is perfectly summed up by the remark of Bernard Shaw's which made a great impression on me:—

"Clerking was formerly a monopoly of the less energetic sons of the middle-class. Now that everybody has to go to school the middle-class monopoly of reading, writing and clerking is gone; and skilled manual workers are better paid than clerks, being scarcer."

I am a skilled manual worker. I say that my son would be better off if I apprenticed him to my own trade at an early age, because he will always have a skill with a marketable value.

Of course there is just the outside chance that he may be a brilliant exception, but he shows no signs of such brilliance, and for this reason I think my own ambitions on his behalf are saner and more likely to be realised.

Again, instead of the number of "white collar" jobs growing to accommodate the increasing number of candidates it is actually growing less all the time. More and more of such work is being done by machines in banks, offices, insurance companies, and so forth.

Once upon a time a secondary school education was more or less a passport to a safe job for life. To-day it is no such guarantee. That is why I want to reject the idea, and why I consider that my wife's point of view, though understandable, is nevertheless wrong.

She wants to back the outside chance that our son may enjoy some spectacular kind of success. I prefer to back the favourite at short odds.

If I am going to make a sacrifice for my son, I prefer it to be on the sacrifice of seeing him earning small money during a long—but definitely worth while—apprenticeship in my own trade.

Mother Says:—

I am the boy's mother. It seems to me that my husband's attitude, though sound, is nevertheless limited and narrow-minded.

I am definitely willing to make the sacrifice necessary to give him a secondary school education. Here is a chance that my son will go anywhere. Who knows? It seems to me almost criminal to turn it down.

It is all very well for my husband to give theoretical reasons for his poor opinion of a secondary school education, but if they were really valid, why is such an education sought after for their children by nearly all parents who can afford it?

And although my husband may have been happy and successful in his trade, why should he assume that our son would be happy and successful in it? The boy is far too young to have given any reliable indication as yet.

It seems to me that fathers are far too ready to assume that their sons will be like them rather than like one of their thousands of ancestors. The boy may have inherited my brother's mathematical ability or his great-grandfather's talent for architecture. Again, who knows? It is not fair to assume that he will be unable to open one of the doors to which a secondary school education might lead him. I say that he must be given the chance.

Naturally I should be the happiest of women if he grasped his opportunity and used it to carve a career for himself. But even if he didn't, even if my husband's worst fears were realised I should still prefer this to the possibility that he might turn round one day and say, "Why didn't you give me a chance?"

That would be dreadful. Whereas, if he is given his opportunity now, and if he should fail, at least we have the consolation that we ourselves should have nothing to reproach.

There is another point which my husband has completely overlooked, in his rather narrow, limited, and severely practical Summing-up, I believe the education we have it in

Shanghai Events In Pictures—

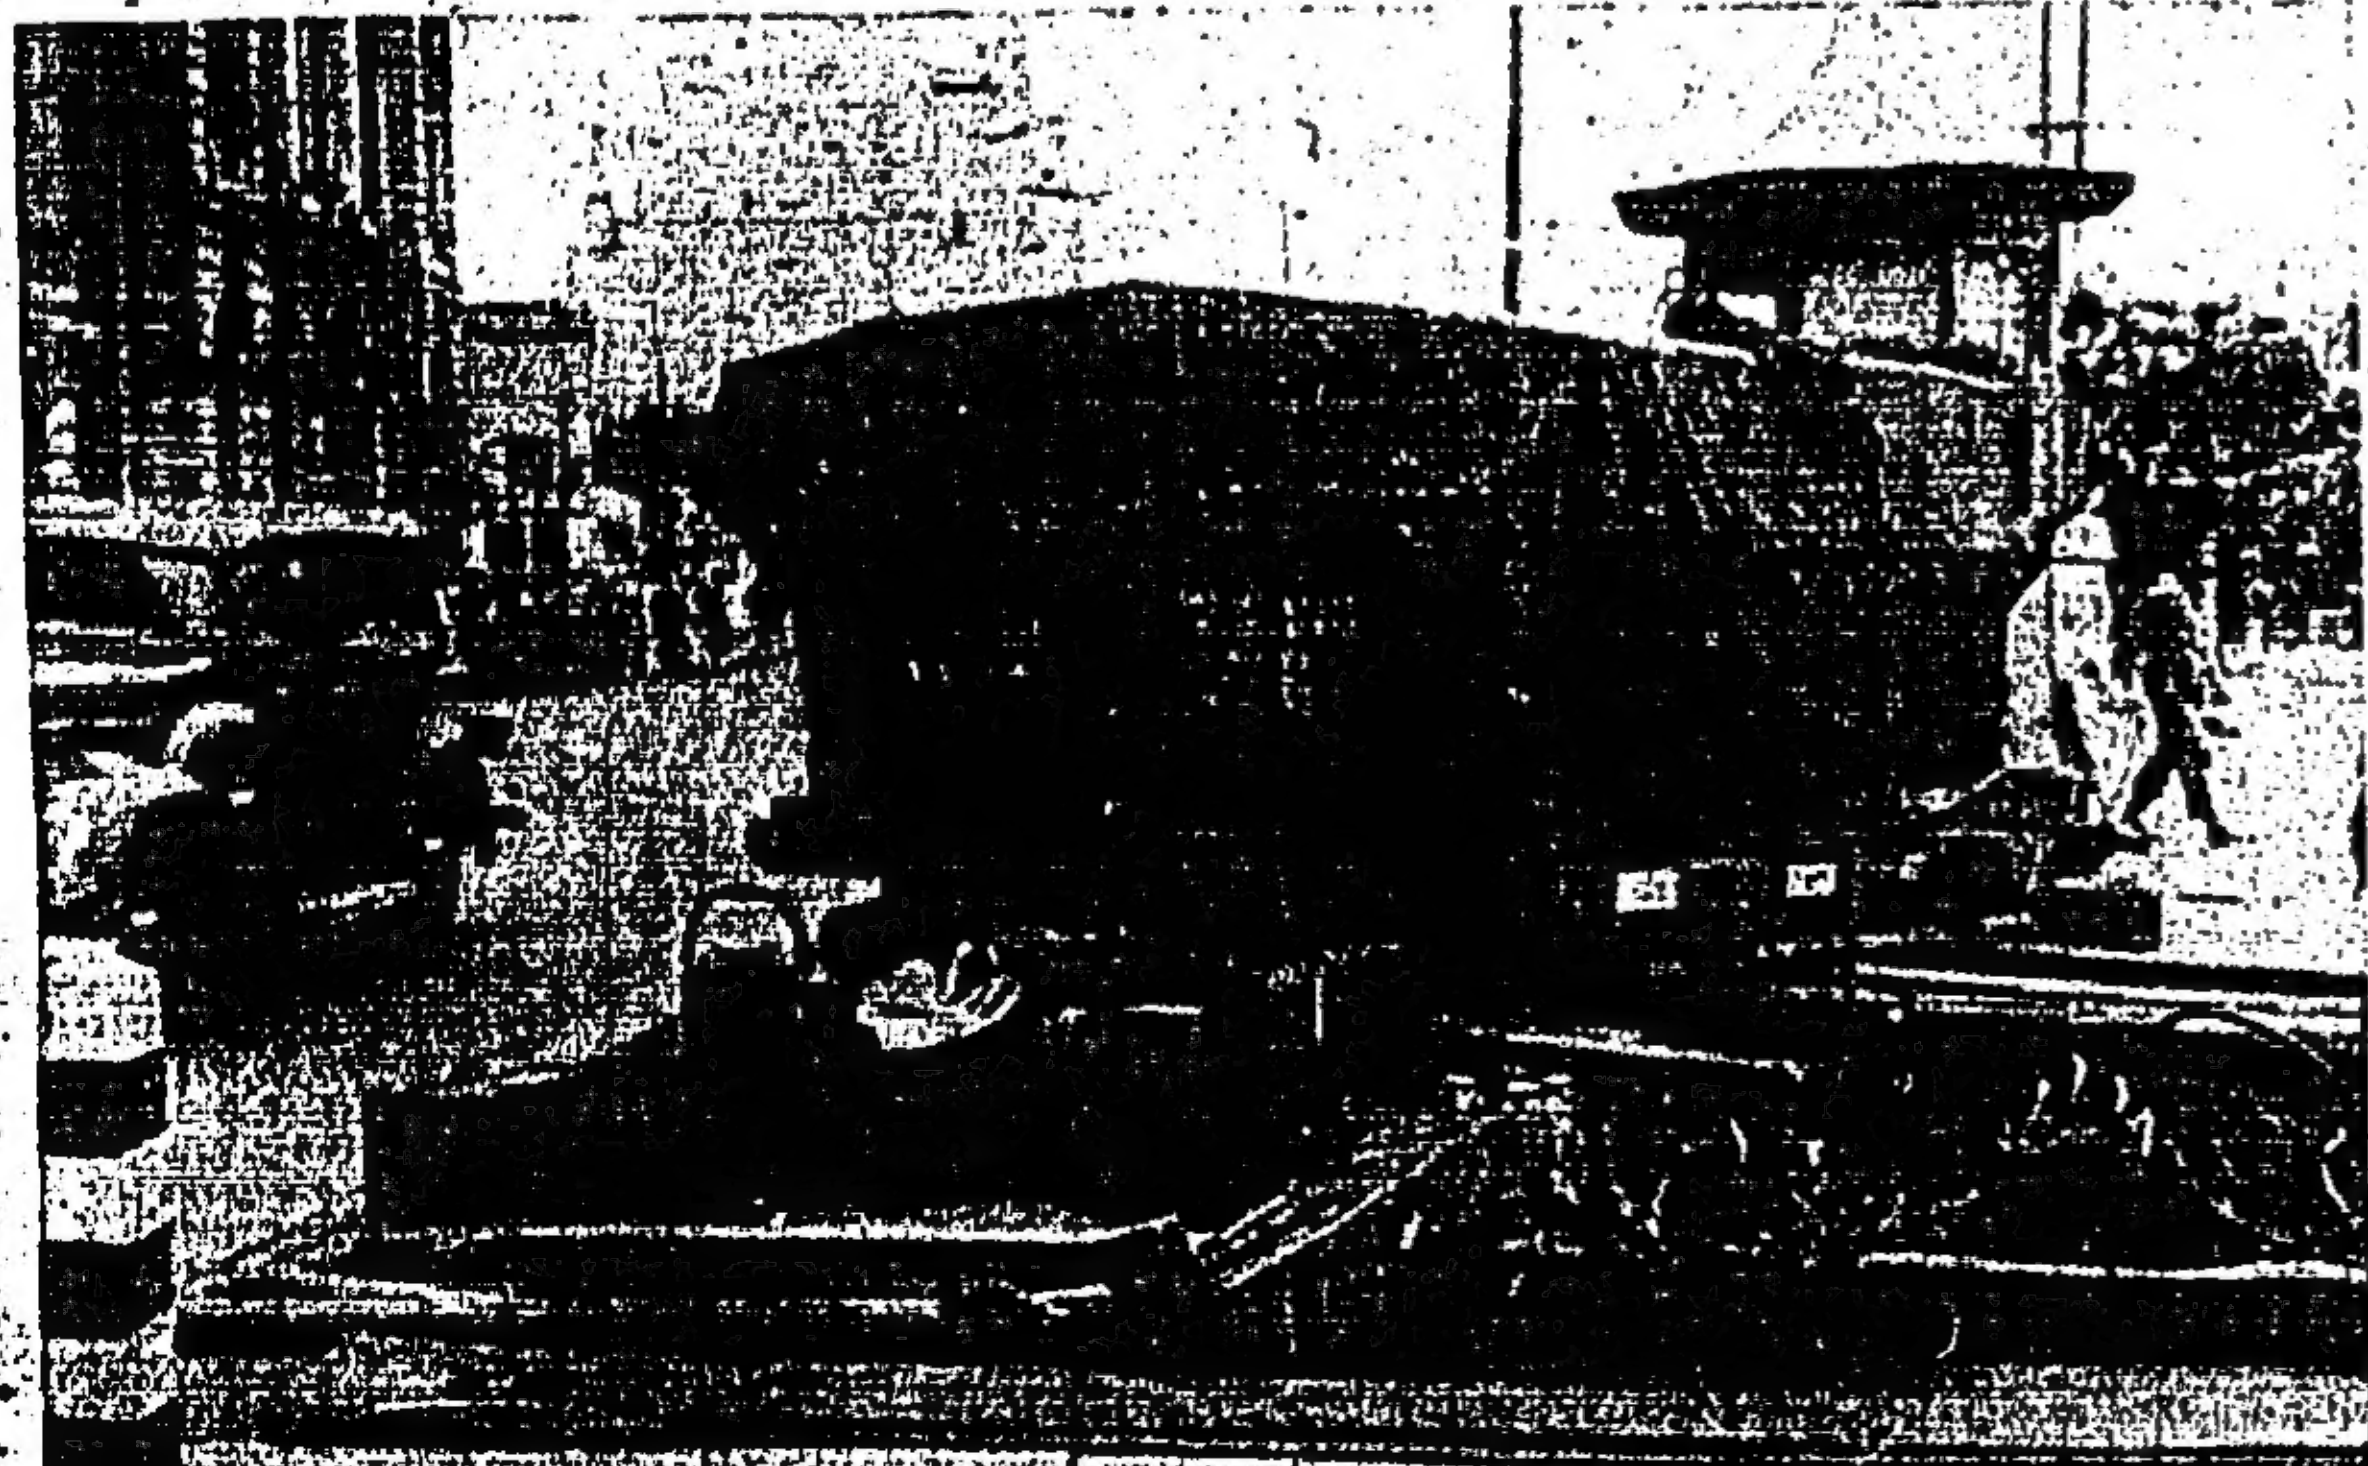

The scenes presented last week at the Shanghai American School when 35 students graduated were both beautiful and impressive. The graduates walked slowly across the wide expanse of lawn on the Quadrangle to the strains of the U.S.M.C. Band. They were preceded by junior girls in white carrying two garlands of the daisy chain. The senior girls looked very lovely in their varied coloured frocks. A large audience congregated for the ceremony and Dr. Gordon Potat gave the address which is his last one in China.

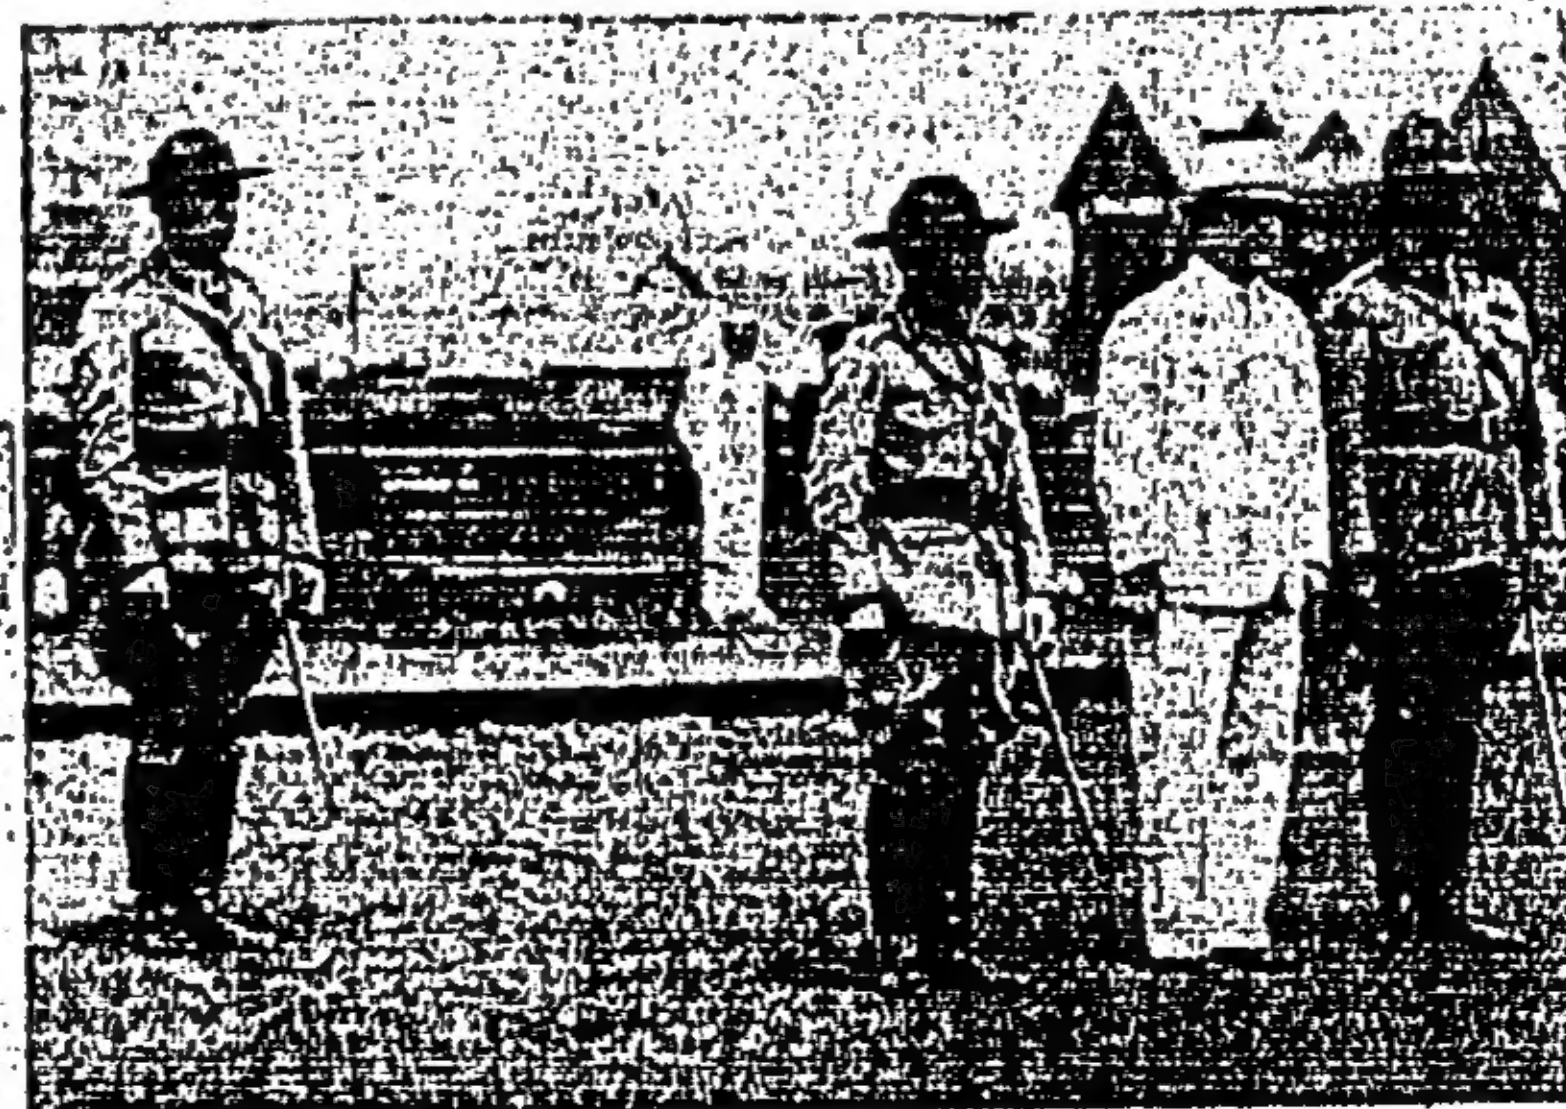

FRENCH FLIERS HONOURED.—M. Marcel Doret and M. Francois Micheletti, the French aviators who crashed 150 miles from their goal in an attempt to make a flight from Paris to Tokyo within 100 hours, were honoured at a dinner held at the French Police Club recently which this photo was taken.

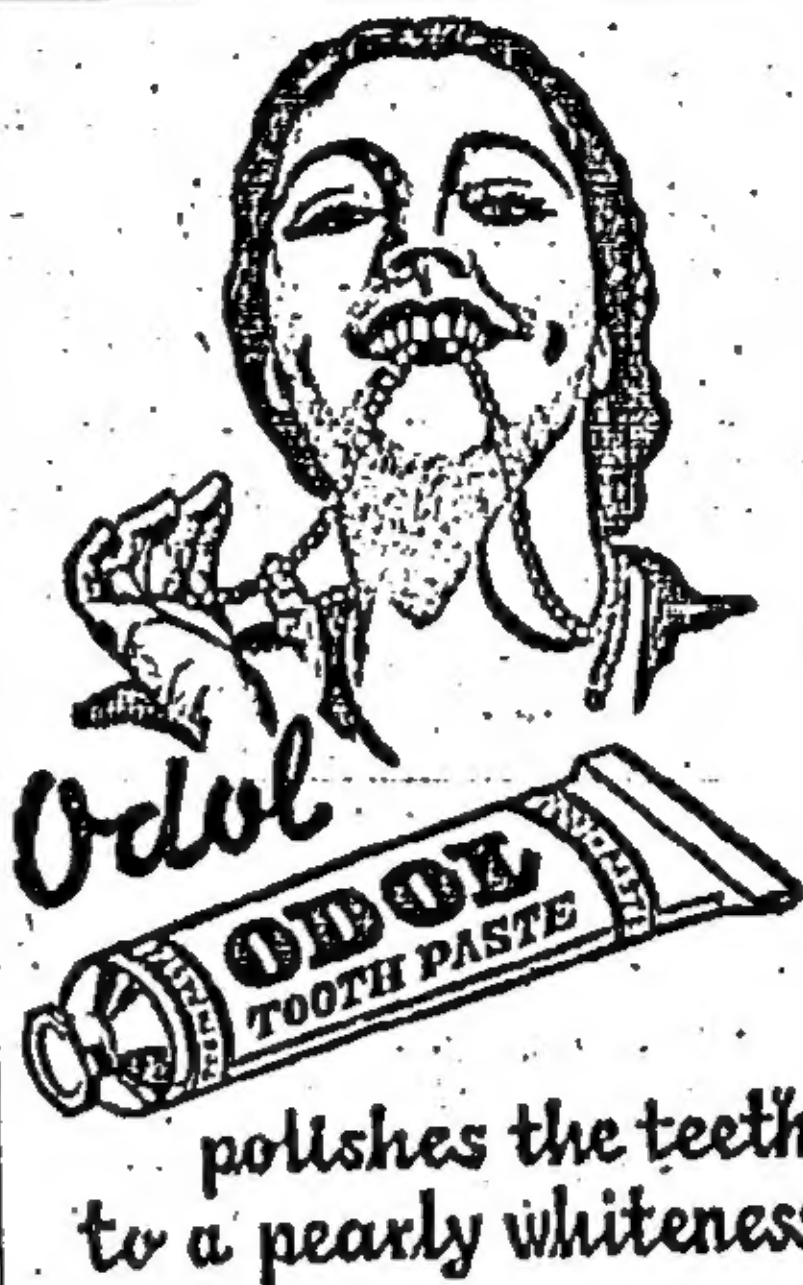

CHILDREN'S PARTY.—A special garden party was held recently for local Scandinavian children at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Blom, Shanghai, when the above photograph was taken. There was a large gathering of mothers and children to enjoy tea and games.

Stalled at Peking Road and the Bund because the transporting equipment broke down, the weighty steel door to the new vault of the Bank of China is shown as it appeared one day last week. After midnight last night scores of chanting coolies tugged to bring the 20-ton object to the new building, just about 200 yards away. Complete, the new vault is said to have cost $1,750,000.

Last week on the Shanghai Race Course the Fourth United States Marine Corps paraded in honour of Mr. C. S. Franklin, Chairman of the Shanghai Municipal Council. Photo shows, right to left, Colonel C. F. B. Price, Marines' Commander, Mr. Franklin, Lieut.-Colonel Pierce, staff officer, and Captain Lannigan, adjutant.

CARDINALS FAIL TO HALT CUBS

Powerful Hitting By White Sox

New York, July 1. Chicago again beat St. Louis today lengthening the lead in the National League. Collins hit a homer for the Cubs, and the score was six to three.

New York went further ahead, in second inning, defeating Philadelphia, eight to six. Each team hit eight times. Martin hitting a home run for the Phillies. Ott and Berger each circling the bases for the Giants.

Boston won from Brooklyn, four to one.

AMERICAN LEAGUE
New York Yankees continued their unbroken winning streak by whipping Philadelphia in a heavy-hitting duel. The Yankees got 14 men to bases, not counting walks, and Di Maggio and Powell hit homers for 12 runs in all. Athletics hit all for seven runs. Philadelphia had five errors.

Washington defeated Boston, three to two.
Chicago hit 20 times, scoring 15 runs, with the help of Hayes' homer, when the White Sox met Detroit. Tigers hit 11, York pounding the ball over the fence, and scored eight. Each had two errors.

St. Louis and Cleveland postponed their game because of rain.—Reuter.

Conservatives Retain Seat

London, July 1.

Out of an electorate of 74,000, less than 30,000 voters went to the poll in the by-election in the Kingston-on-Thames Division, caused by Sir George Fenn's elevation to the peerage. The seat was retained by the Conservatives with a greatly reduced majority. Details: Admiral Percy Roys (Con.) 19,887. Mr. G. H. Loman (Lab.) 9,972.

Con. majority 9,915.

At the last General Election, Sir George Fenn had a majority of 22,939, polling 32,953 against 10,014 secured by Mr. Loman, whilst Mr. F. J. Powell (Liberal) polled 5,832 votes.

KEEN FIGHT

London, July 1. The by-election at St. Ives, Cornwall, caused by the elevation to the peerage of Mr. Walter Runciman (Liberal Nationalist) was declared today, after a recount, as follows:

Mr. A. Beeliman (Lib.) 12,044.

Mr. Isaac Foot (Lib.) 12,834.

Lib. Nat. majority 210.

St. Ives was the ninth of twelve by-elections that were pending, and Government supporters have won all nine.—British Wireless.

Cut In Taxes Necessitates Retrenchment

Canton, July 2.

In a statement to the press, Mayor Tseng Yang-fu, who is also Commissioner of Finance for Kwangtung, announced today that the provincial budget for the 26th fiscal year shows a shortage of over $10,000,000 for Administration expenditure. This was due to the abolition of many miscellaneous taxes.

The Administration's expenditure has increased by over $30,000,000, he said. But the budget must be balanced. Mayor Tseng declared this could only be accomplished by retrenchment in various Government departments.

The Government had wiped out over 600 taxes and would continue to eradicate such as were found harsh. The Finance Department had already sent investigators to various districts to study the tax situation, he added.—Reuter.

"Silent Zone" Offences

Cautions For Four Kowloon Residents

Cautions were administered in four summonses before Mr. E. Himsforth at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning for breaches of the new traffic regulations prohibiting the sounding of horns in silent zones of Kowloon.

Major B. E. Dixon, R.E., residing at No. 278, Prince Edward Road, summoned for sounding his motor car horn in Austin Road, near Nathan Road, at 12.55 a.m. on June 6, sent a letter pleading guilty. He wrote that he was turning the corner and, seeing some people about to step off the kerb, sounded his horn. It was then that he noticed that they comprised a police picket.

F. H. Hegerter, residing at No. 213, Prince Edward Road, was summoned for sounding his horn at 1 a.m. on June 7 in Nathan Road. Defendant did not appear, but also sent a letter pleading guilty.

R. V. Lederhofer, residing at No. 108, Waterloo Road, was summoned for sounding his horn at 1.30 a.m. on June 7 in Nathan Road near Mody Road.

C. Spradbury, No. 1 United Terrace, was summoned for blowing his horn at 12.30 a.m. on June 5 in Nathan Road near Hillwood Road.

OTHER CASES
G. Harvey, of the British American Tobacco Company, was fined $5 by Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy this morning when he pleaded guilty to having failed to notify the police of the change in ownership of private car No. 4253. Defendant stated that he had been told by the person from whom he bought the car that the police had been notified and that he himself need not do so until he renewed his licence.

On another summons, of parking his car in Duddell Street, a road closed to traffic, at 10.30 a.m. on June 19, defendant was cautioned.

A summons against E. Funck, of Jebson and Company, was adjourned till 2.30 p.m. on Friday, July 10, on defendant pleading not guilty.

It was alleged that defendant drove his car, No. 2608, in the controlled area in Queen's Road East on June 18 at a speed of 30 miles per hour.

Defendant stated he could not have done so, as he was following a

FARR NOW TO FIGHT JOE LOUIS

Schmeling Again Disappointed

London, July 1. Ted Brondribb, manager of the Welsh heavyweight, Tommy Farr, has announced that he has accepted terms and conditions offered by Mike Jacobs, manager of the Detroit negro, Joe Louis, claimant of the world's championship as a result of his victory on June 22 over Jim Braddock.

Farr and Louis will fight for the world's title some time in September. The Welshman, it was announced recently, would fight Max Schmeling, German ex-champion of the world, and that fight also was billed as a championship encounter. But it has been abandoned, presumably because Jacobs is offering better terms, and Schmeling will probably meet the winner.—Reuter.

LAST BUCKINGHAM PALACE COURT

London, July 1. The distinguishing features of the last Buckingham Palace Court in Coronation year were the wearing of the Royal Air Force uniform for the first time by a King of England during a Court, and the wearing of the world-famous Kohinoor diamond by Queen Elizabeth, also for the first time.

Over six hundred guests were present. Two more Courts are being held next week at Holyrood Palace, during the royal visit to Edinburgh.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

ELECTRIFICATION

London, July 1. The Southern Railway's mail line electrification between London and Portsmouth, completed at a cost of £3,000,000, was opened today. The new service will double the number of trains along this 74-mile route.—British Wireless.
